U. S. Considers Plan to Convert 5 Billion Bonds

Treasury May Act to Prevent Further Gold Actions.

British Holders Weigh Test Suit

Legislation May Block Any Recourse to Claims Court.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As prospects increased yesterday that the Administration would seek legislation outlawing further suits under the gold clause in Federal bonds, Treasury officials indicated the possibility of converting during this year approximately $5,500,000,000 of Government obligations containing a promise to pay in gold.

Leaving a meeting of the National Emergency Council with President Roosevelt, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said it was not "imperative" but it might be desirable to "ring down the curtain" on the gold-clause controversy by withdrawing the privilege of bondholders to file suit under this clause in the Court of Claims.

Meanwhile Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson pointed out the possibility that the Government might be harassed with further suits under the gold clause by bondholders who believed they could meet the requirement of damages set up by the Supreme Court in its epochal 5-to-4 decision Monday.

Two Ways to End Suits.

The Senate leader said he would not initiate any legislation on his account, deferring to the wishes of the Administration in that matter, but that he saw two alternatives by which the controversy could be ended. One, he said, would be to withdraw the privilege of suing in the Court of Claims and the other a gigantic conversion operation under which all gold-clause Federal bonds would be retired.

Treasury officials, however, saw stiff obstacles in the way of carrying out the latter plan. Approximately $14,500,000,000 of outstanding obligations bear the promise to pay in gold. Of this amount obligations with a face value of only approximately $5,500,000,000 become due or are callable in the next year. Since the other gold-clause securities bear a comparatively high interest rate it is doubted whether their holders would voluntarily surrender them, unless an equally attractive bond were given them in exchange.

It is probable that the Treasury during this calendar year will call those parts of the first and fourth liberty loan issues still outstanding—not only because they are gold-clause bonds but because they can be refunded through an issue with a lower interest rate, thus saving the Treasury money.

Markets Subside.

Meanwhile the security and commodity markets lost the bullish enthusiasm they displayed Monday over the Supreme Court rulings. With the exception of Government bonds, prices were generally lower. Some stocks were down from 50 cents to $2 a share under Monday's closing prices; cotton dipped between 45 and 70 cents a bale and wheat was down almost 1 cent a bushel. The dollar in foreign exchange was slightly depressed.

This trend, however, did not cause concern. The Supreme Court in effect had indorsed the status quo and Monday's subsequent bullish movement was psychological. Financial observers believed that the long-range effects of the high tribunal's decision would be beneficial.

Elimination of the uncertainty over the gold clauses, and thus over the country's monetary policies, it was believed, would be reflected in the launching of numerous refunding operations which have been held back, first due to the restrictions under the 1933 securities act, and when they were removed by uncertainty over outcome of the gold cases.

Considers Test Suit.

From foreign shores came another threat to the Government's position on the gold clause in Federal bonds, but it did not cause much concern here. London cables reported that the British Bondholders Protective Committee, formed after the United States abandoned the gold standard, will meet next week to determine what action it can take under the Supreme Court rulings.

The committee, which represents British holders of American Government and private bonds containing a promise to pay in gold or its equivalent, will discuss the possibility of filing a test suit under the Supreme Court decision in the Perry case.

The question was pondered in Europe, as it was also in this country, whether a foreign holder of a Treasury bond might not be able to prove the damages, due to disparity in foreign exchange, that the Supreme Court held necessary.

The official view of the Administration is that the foreign holders of Treasury bonds can not claim any concession denied to Americans. They contend that all Treasury bonds were domestic issues, offered and sold only in the American

Germany's Ax Poised to Fall On Male Spies

Two Held in Death Cells; Women Died Stoically, Witness States.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Berlin, Feb. 20 (Wednesday)—Two men, one a former naval technician, caught in the ever-tightening Reichswehr espionage net, are marked to follow the two women spies who lost their heads yesterday on the block at Ploetzense Prison, it was learned today.

Now knowing definitely the fate awaiting them, the two men were spending their last hours before decapitation in cells near those occupied by Benita von Falkenhayn and Renate von Natzmer, who died silently and without a show of emotion.

Their only inkling of what is to happen to them comes from the knowledge that nobody leaves a death cell in grim Ploetzense Prison alive and free.

The identity of the second man could not be learned. Their names were expected to be announced later.

An eye witness to the execution

Air Lines Ask Congress' Aid To Halt 'Ruin'

Cite $2,908,000 Losses; Urge Increase in Fee for Flying Mail.

Citing losses of $2,908,000 since last May, when operation of the air-mail system was turned back by the Army to private contractors, the country's major air transport operators yesterday appealed "for immediate legislation if the air transportation system is to exist."

Financial structures of a number of the lines now operating under temporary legislation have become so depleted that many of them have funds available to continue operating only a short time, said a statement issued through the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

In asking for congressional action the air-line executives pointed to the fact that President Roosevelt and the Federal Aviation Commission in recent weeks both have recommended prompt consideration of the problem by Congress.

Average Compensation.

At present, the approximate average compensation paid to the aircraft operators for transportation of air mail is .6 cents a mile. Before Government cancellation of the contracts the operator received about 40 cents a mile.

From figures supplied to Postoffice officials this means that an increase of between 20 and 30 per cent in air-mail recenue is needed to allow the companies to balance their books.

At almost the same hour as airline officials appealed for help, Representative James Mad (Democrat), New York, introduced a bill in the House "to revise the air-mail laws and to authorize the Postmaster General to extend the air-mail service." Officials of the Aeronautical Chamber refused to comment on this development, stating that they had not had sufficient time to carefully analyze the new bill's provisions.

Mead's bill would place air-mail rate control under the Interstate

Bonus Forces Gain Offers From Senate

Compromise Proposals Made; Petition for House Cash Bill.

Veterans' Lobby Active as Fight Rages on Works Fund.

By Robert C. Albright.

Swiftly spreading congressional bonus sentiment, prodded by an active veterans' lobby, yesterday swept forward two new compromise proposals from conservative Senate quarters and launched a House petition drive for unconditional cash payment.

Developments came in the thick of an Administration fight to head off payment to the veterans out of the President's $4,880,000,000 works and relief bill. Half a dozen leftwing amendments, with the bonus in the forefront, threatened the Federal aid measure, as Senate debate entered its third day.

Entirely apart from the works measure, the following bonus moves developed yesterday:

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, author of House bill No. 1, to pay the bonus in cash, announced circulation of a House bonus petition, beginning tomorrow. Under revised House rules, 218 signatures, a majority of House members, are needed. Patman declared he could get them.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, himself a veteran, but not hitherto in the ranks of bonus advocates, introduced a bill for paying the bonus in negotiable Government bonds, bearing 3 per cent interest, and maturing in 1945. The measure would not cost the Government additional money, but would enable needy veterans to obtain funds immediately, minus interest.

Bulkley Plan Reported.

Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, Administration stalwart, was reported to be drafting a measure to pay the bonus in Government notes that would decrease in value with each exchange, if continued in circulation. A variation of the same plan has been proposed by Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri. Clark would pay the bonus in nonnegotiable scrip, redeemable only by the Government in fulfillment of obligations.

Senator Bulow (Democrat), South Dakota, proposed paying off the bonus obligation through direct Treasury appropriation, in new currency that would be retired July 1, 1945.

Meantime, Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson predicted defeat of a threatened amendment to the works and relief bill to pay the bonus in cash out of the public works jackpot.

Robinson, who is striving at the same time to beat down silver, greenback and labor amendments to the omnibus works measure, said the bonus should not and would not be attached to the bil as a rider. He declined to comment on the Tydnigs bonus compromise measure.

Adding to his difficulties in fighting the Administration's battle on the President's $4,880,000,000 measure was amendment offered yesterday by Senator Robert M. LaFollette (Progressive), Wisconsin, to nicrease the works appropriation to $10,000,000,000. The amendment is backed by a bloc of Democratic and Republican progressives.

Wage Scale Problem.

Another stiff controversy impends, with a showdown possible today, on an amendment by Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, backed by labor, to pay prevailing wage scales on work relief projects. The President wants to pay only $50 a month, to encourage a return to private payrolls.

With no prospect of passing the bill within the week, the President yesterday allotted $45,000,000 in unexpended works funds, to tide the Federal Emergency Relief Administration over until March 1. The allocation was in addition to $50,000,000 allocated for the same purpose ten days ago. If the works bill is passed, $880,000,000 will be

Gifts of $50,000,000 By Mellon Will Make Capital Art Center

National Gallery, Sought Here for Years, Now Appears Certainty; Other Treasures Expected to Be Acquired With Erection of Building.

By Felix Bruner.

A dream of years—establishment in Washington of a national gallery of art—appeared a certainty yesterday.

Announcement by Andrew W. Mellon's attorneys that he plans to present to the Nation some of the world's most prized paintings and to erect a building in which they will be housed was looked upon as the beginning of the fulfillment of plans to make Washington an art center comparable to other national capitals.

The announcement that Mr. Mellon had been buying great paintings for the purpose of presenting them to the Nation did not come as a surprise to many Washington art lovers. He has discussed his plans privately, but has heretofore objected to any public statement of his intentions.

Mr. Mellon has not yet disclosed the full details of his plan, but it is understood to include the erection of a building which will house the $19,000,000 collection of pictures, which he has announced he will present, in addition to other art acquisitions.

For years there has been a movement for establishment of a national gallery in Washington. A special commission, of which Mr. Mellon is a member, has been working on the plan. A design has been drawn by Charles A. Platt, architect of the Freer Gallery, and a site has been chosen on the Mall just west of Twelfth street. Nothing further has been accomplished because of lack of funds.

It is understood that the gallery to be erected by Mr. Mellon is not intended to take the place of the proposed national gallery, but it is probably that it may become a part of such a museum and supplemental to it. It is expected that it will house not only gifts from the builder, but other art treasures.

It has long been known that there are many paintings, sculptures and other works of art in the United States which would become the property of the Government and of the people if an adequate place for their exhibition could be provided. The Mellon proposal, it is hoped, will give impetus to the plan for a museum in which these treasures can be stored.

At present there are two art gal-

Senate Asked To Reconsider Two Treaties

Effacing of Reservations Sought in Geneva Arms, Pan-America Pact.

The Administration has started a drive for the ratification in an acceptable form of the Geneva arms treaty of 1925 and the inter-American arbitration treaty signed here in 1929, it was revealed yesterday.

Both treaties have been ratified by the Senate, but with reservations which were so distasteful to the State Department that the President failed to promulgate the ratifications, thus leaving them ineffective. The Senate has now been asked to withdraw the objectionable reservations.

The Geneva arms treaty, the first step taken by the nations of the world for some kind of control of the munitions traffic, was signed in 1925, but for nine years it collected dust in the pigeonholes of a desk in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee room. For years the pact was regarded as a hopeful step toward general disarmament.

Persian Issue Not Clear.

President Roosevelt last June pleaded for ratification of the pact when he sent a message to the Senate indorsing its plan to investigate the American munitions industry. But when the Senate acted, it attached to the treaty a reservation regarding the sovereignty of Persia over the Persian Gulf, which has never been made clear.

Adopted without debate and with few of those present in the Senate realizing what they were doing, this reservation — offered by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah—provided that nothing in the treaty impaired Persia's sovereignty over the Persian Gulf. Persia has never been conceded sovereignty over the Persian Gulf, where the British have a substantial interest.

As a result of this reservation, President Roosevelt pigeonholed

Army Seeking $318,131,482 In Big Budget

House Measure Calls for $62,583,335 Jump for War Dept.

(Associated Press.)

By far the largest budget for national defense since 1921 was foreshadowed yesterday with the House debut of a War Department appropriation bill carrying $318,131,482 for military activities alone.

The Navy supply bill is yet to be reported to the House, but members of the Appropriations Committee said the 1936 figure for the military services would exceed by approximately $100,000,000 any defense fund since the Washington Naval Conference.

The Navy bill, it was said, will be around $477,000,000 and the services are scheduled to get an additional $40,000,000 from public works funds.

The War Department bill totaled $62,583,335 more than the 1935 allowance and $672,205 over the amount recommended in the budget.

The measure dealt liberally with virtually every branch of the regular service, as well as the National Guard and military units such as the Reserve Officers Corps.

Army Increase Provided.

It was the committee's answer to a warning from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, that "the whole framework of the national defense is so tenuous that if you put your finger at any one spot it seems weak and is subject to marked criticism."

Responding to the Army's plea that the enlisted strength of the Army is dangerously low, the committee wrote into the bill specific authorization for President Roosevelt to increase as he sees fit the Army's strength from 118,750 to 165,000, and the National Guard by 5,000 men.

Representative Bolton, of Ohio, ranking Republican on the War Department sub-committee, expressed disappointment as debate opened in

Super-Roads Considered In Work Plan

Net of Wide Highways Urged to Roosevelt to Supply Jobs.

President Weighs Plea for Buying Land Half-Mile Wide.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Proposals for a new form of empire building—a network of superhighways—have been seriously considered by President Roosevelt in connection with the $4,880,000,000 works program, it was reported yesterday.

The President, it was learned, has discussed with Congressional advisers the possibility of using a substantial portion of the works fund, now awaiting Senate passage, to link the country's international boundaries with smooth, arrow-straight four-lane thoroughfares.

Tentative plans call for three of the master roads connecting the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and two others stretching from Canada to Florida and Mexico. Nearly every State would be crossed by one of the roadways in this vast mosaic pattern.

To be Self-Liquidating.

While the rank and file of Senators and Representatives have been kept pretty much in the dark concerning details of the work program, a dozen or so of the New Deal's real leaders on Capitol Hill in recent conferences heard Mr. Roosevelt enthusiastically unfold his views on how many jobs could be created through construction of superhighways.

The President emphasized the self-liquidating phase of the road program. He explained the Government could buy broad tracts flanking the highways and obtain the benefit from the increased property valuation.

Observers recalled the storm of protest from Republicans against Federal competition with private business drawn by the guarded testimony last month of Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, Treasury procurement chief, before a Senate committee.

Carefully avoiding mention of superhighways, he at first declared the Government would sell gasoline along roads it built. Later he denied the Government would "enter the gasoline business" and predicted it, instead, would derive revenue from "concessions" along its routes.

State Cooperation Required.

The clause in the works bill to authorize purchase of land under the power of eminent domain was intended, it was said in informed quarters, to expedite construction of the superhighways. The President indicated he would expect cooperation from States in obtaining the right of way. The roads would be built through back country where land could be acquired at a low figures. There was talk of creation of a new Federal corporation to build the highways.

President Roosevelt displayed what friends described as "uncanny knowledge" of American geography in discussing the new traffic arteries. Outlining a suggested Southern route, he glanced slyly across his desk at Vice President Garner and quipped:

"We'll have to cut this highway short because Texas is impenetrable."

January Awards $99,000,000.

One of the President's advisers got the impression the right of way would be half a mile wide. When the plan was in an embryonic stage last fall, however, Secretary Ickes fixed the width at 1,000 feet and suggested the roads should be landscaped until they were the most beautiful in the world.

Meanwhile, the F. W. Dodge Corporation, in a report to Secrttary Ickes, placed at $99,773,900 the January total of construction contracts awarded in the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains. Exactly $54,555,600 represented projects of public ownership and $45,218,300 jobs of private ownership.

Farley Inquiry Stifled in N.Y., By Democrats

Aldermen Refuse Reading of Probe Resolution Offered by G.O.P.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Without even allowing it to be read through, the Democratic majority in the Board of Aldermen today tabled a resolution aimed in two-fold fashion at Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Introduced by Alderman A. Newbold Morris, Republican, the resolution gave approval to the "impending investigation by the United States Senate into the activities of certain business concerns in which it is reputed that the Postmaster General has been, or has had, directly or indirectly a financial interest" and further called for a local investigation.

Morris handed the resolution to the reading clerk. Hardly had the clerk finished the first sentence when the Democrats got into action. Alderman Edward Sullivan, from Greenwich Village, moved to table. It carried easily.

Morris protested what he termed the discourtesy in not allowing his

Ruling to Ease U. S. Barriers To Ford Sales

Technicalities Waived in Pending Decision on Actual Compliance.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Henry Ford, once center of a stormy NRA dispute, was reliably reported yesterday to be a beneficiary of an Administration ruling now being drafted that would allow him to sell more cars to the Government.

Even in advance of the ruling it was disclosed that the Interior Department already has purchased 35 Fords, and the Agriculture Department around 400.

To this, Commerce Department purchasing officials asserted they were willing to buy Fords on the basis of "available" evidence that the Detroit concern is complying with Blue Eagle codes.

High officials stressed that compliance with NRA codes was still a prerequisite to selling to the Government, but two declared rules were being drafted to prevent those actually complying from being excluded by technicalities.

Way Paved for Protests.

All this became known in connection with preparations by the War Department to advertise for bids for approximately 2,500 automobiles.

The formal ruling, expected by officials to be an interpretation of the President's executive order on compliance with codes, reportedly would clear the air not alone for Ford but for several other large companies. Included would be Sears, Roebuck & Co., whose president, Robert E. Wood, recently was selected to advise in the spending of $4,000,000,000 under the proposed work-relief bill.

Officials declined to say whether the Ford company was cognizant of the proposed ruling. Although the formal order has not been completed, they believed it would be an interpretation which would specify that a certificate of NRA compliance did not preclude the signer from objecting in the courts

Dropped Case When Firm Involved Promised to Quit D. C.

Hazy on Procedure Here, He Confesses

In Police Court But Once Since Taking Office, He Tells Probers.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday unfolded before the House District Crime sub-committee a story of a deal he made with the General News Co., which disseminated racing results to Washington gamblers.

He agreed not to prosecute the wealthy officers of the company on their promise to withdraw their service from Washington, he said.

He told, too, of his decision to seek cooperation of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. rather than prosecute for violation of the gambling laws by service supplied gamblers. He wasn't entirely satisfied with the cooperation he got from the commercial department of the company, he said.

In Police Court Only Once.

He has been in Police Court, where thousands of felony cases are passed on in preliminary hearings, only once since he took office, he said.

"I don't know what the practice is here," he said once again in response to questions about District procedure and laws. In Virginia, "where I actually prosecuted cases," things were done differently, he added.

His statements were in response to questions asked by committee members and John R. Fitzpatrick, committee counsel. uestions about police court procedure were designed to show the importance of that court in the handling of felony cases. The district attorney upheld the preliminary hearings as a means by which the Government acquires knowledge of the defense attitude. The defense, Mr. Fitzpatrick said, has no right in law to present its case, seldom does so and can not be compelled to do so, although judges occasionally permit defense testimony.

Action Dropped by Agreement.

Prosecution of the General News case was dropped by agreement with the company officers, Mr. Garnett said, naming an otherwise unidentified Ottenstein as the local manager, and Moe Annenberg as "the big shot" heading the company. The company, he said, "furnished all gambling establishments in Washington with the information about race results which enabled them to operate."

"There was possibly a very grave question whether this corporation was violating the law," he said in defense of his agreement. "The General News made me a proposition. They were most anxious to escape prosecution and possible conviction. They agreed to withdraw entirely from Washington. I took the proposition up with the Department of Justice and agreed to it. We considered withdrawal of the company an efficacious means of curtailing gambling activities in Washington. Evidence was presented to the grand jury, but there was no indictment."

Local gamblers tapped the company's wires outside Washington and bootlegged the information in the Capital but that has been "broken up," he said.

Gives Data on 'Phone Company.

Questioned about the Chesapeake & Potomac Co. and the large number of telephones used by gamblers, Mr. Garnett repeated the statement made earlier in the hearing by Maj. Ernst W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Lieut. George Little, chief of the vice squad.

"My office has received 100 per cent cooperation from the legal department of the company," he said. "I'm not so sure we have received 100 per cent cooperation from the commercial department. Since the Sam Beard case, when when found 60 'phones in one room, whenever I have notified them I had evidence

'Black Eagle of Harlem' Poised To Wing to Aid of Ethiopians

New York, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Col. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, the "Black Eagle of Harlem," is getting ready to fly to the rescue of Abyssinia.

The world's most famous Negro aviator today broke silence to explain he has been too busy assembling combat and bombing planes and recruiting pilots to comment on the Italo-Abyssinian crisis.

The colonel—that's his rank in the A. A. F. (Abyssinian Air Force)—disclosed that on reading last week of Premier Mussolini's warlike gestures toward Abyssinia his first impulse had been to hop off at once for Addis Ababa.

"Such was my instinctive reaction to the news of Italy's aggression toward my friend, the Emperor Haile Selassie I," said the colonel, "but I restrained my ardor while assembling some combat and bombing equipment which I will take with me direct to Aden, Arabia, whence I will fly the planes to Addis Ababa.

"Italy is making a terrible mistake. The only disparity between the combatants is in the air. Once that is remedied, Abyssinia has nothing to fear.

"I shall be accompanied by Capt. Edison C. McVey and possibly by other Negro aviators. There are seven who have pilots' licenses."

The Black Eagle was in "civvies" when he journeyed downtown from Harlem to make these disclosures, eschewing his regular A. A. F. uniform of pink polo shirt, green-striped white riding pants and silver-spurred deerskin boots.

He was anxious that there be no misunderstanding as to his being persona grata with Haile Selassie since "that unfortunate contretemps at the coronation when I cracked up his new plane."

He displayed a telegram addressed to him at London and dated Addis Ababa, September 24, 1934. It read: "Do as you like, congratulations. Teclemarcos."

"Teclemarcos," the colonel explained, "is the Abyssinian minister of state. The cable refers to preparation for this present interna-

Hauptmann Execution Stayed While Reilly and Fisher Clash

Trenchard Grants 'Pauper's Plea;' All of Defense Counsel to Confer Tomorrow; Prisoner's Wife Visits Death House.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 19 (U.P.).—While Bruno Richard Hauptmann's lawyers called each other "double-crosser" and "unethical," New Jersey courts today postponed his execution. He was sentenced to die the week of March 18, but now gains lease on life probably to June.

On application of C. Lloyd Fisher, Egbert Rosecrans and Frederick A. Pope, Hauptmann's New Jersey counsel, the condemned slayer of baby Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was granted an indefinite stay of execution pending decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals. Trial Justice Thomas W. Trenchard granted Hauptmann's "pauper's plea" that the State bear cost of printing records for the appeal.

Edward J. Reilly, famous Brooklyn defender, who was Hauptmann's chief of defense counsel, took no part in today's proceedings. From his Brooklyn office he issued a statement describing Fisher as a "double-crosser" and adding, "either Fisher gets out of this case or I get out. I'm sick and tired of all this fooling around."

To this Fisher retorted that Reilly sought unwarranted delay. He charged Reilly had made an "unethical" remark regarding Hauptmann's innocence.

Mrs. Hauptmann visited her husband in the State Prison late today and attempted to compose the differences of lawyers.

"I told the lawyers to stop fighting for Richard's sake and they said they would," she told ntwspapermen.

Mrs. Hauptmann had conferred with Reilly in Brooklyn before talking with the New Jersey lawyers here. After she had left, Fisher was overheard to remark to Pope, "They tried to put one over on us, but they didn't get away with it."

Fisher and Pope announced all defense counsel—including Reilly—would meet here Thursday.

Fisher first obtained from Justice Trenchard consent for the State to pay the cost of the trial records. The State consented. Then the New Jersey lawyers went before Chancellor Luther A. Campbell and obtained a writ of error which automatically stays the sentence of death in the electric chair.

Chancellor Campbell said decision would be rendered March 28, when

French Critic Will Meet Director On 'the Field of Honor' at Dawn

Paris, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—It looked tonight like "swords for two and coffee-cognac for one" shortly after dawn tomorrow as a result of a challenge to a duel on the "field of honor," a rare occurrence in modern France.

The challenge was issued by Bertrand de Jouvenel, young author and critic, and husband of the former Martha Gelhorn, of St. Louis.

He demanded "satisfaction" from Julien Du Vivier, the motion-picture director, for an alleged insult to his honor and fair name as a critic.

De Jouvenel, son of former French Ambassador to Rome Henry de Jouvenel and stepson of the widely known woman writer, Colette, sent his seconds to Du Vivier after the latter had commented bitingly on a published review by young De Jouvenel.

The review saw little, if any, value in a film directed by Du Vivier. De Jouvenel outdid himself in emphasizing what seemed to him to be weak points in the master's production.

Du Vivier commented in no less biting fashion about the review in general and the artistic sensibilities of M. De Jouvenel in particular.

The latter, as the "insulted party," exercised his choice of weapons, stipulating swords.

Efforts to locate the principals failed. De Jouvenel's secretary said he had hurried out to practice fencing.

St. Louis, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Mme Bertrand de Jouvenel, wife of the young French critic, is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Gelhorn, of St. Louis. She was married last year, and is in the United States on a special assignment for Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

Miss Gelhorn was graduated from John Burroughs Preparatory School and Bryn Mawr. Later she was on the staff of the magazine New Republic, and worked for a time in the Paris office of Vogue.

Prince Georges Plans Merger Of Fire Units

Number Must Be Reduced, County Commissioners Declare.

Numbers of volunteer fire departments in the metropolitan area of Prince Georges County will be either abolished or consolidated, it appeared yesterday as the county commissioners declared the number "must be reduced."

"There are too many fire departments in some sections of this county," said Perry Boswell, president of the board of commissioners. "They are costing too much. The condition can not continue. The number has got to be cut down."

Speaking to Earl Wyvill, president of the county's Volunteer Firemen's Association, who had appeared at the meeting at Upper Marlboro in behalf of appropriations, Mr. Boswell declared he was referring to the metropolitan area.

"Overrun," He Declares.

He pointed out that the Washington suburban area is "overrun with fire departments." When a whistle blows there's an engine coming out of every side road, he said.

Wyvill, whose object was to ask for a date on which his executive committee could present requests for increased appropriations, was met with a wall of protest against the "already overbalanced condition." His committee, however, will be heard Tuesday at 3 p. m.

The proposed increase would boost their authorized appropriation of $13,500 to $21,000. This would require a tax of 1 cent on every $100 of real estate. There is no special tax levy at present to cover the appropriation.

Divided Among 22 Units.

The present appropriation is divided among 22 companies. The requested increase would include an allotment of $400 for each piece of equipment, not to exceed $1,200 to any company. There are 52 pieces of equipment in the county.

Members of the board pointed out that most of the towns also levy a tax for maintenance for the fire departments. This amounts to 10 cents in Mount Rainier, 5 cents in Hyattsville and 5 cents in Riverdale. There is no tax in Bladensburg, where the department has the largest enrollment in the county.

In referring to the "overbalanced condition," the commissioners pointed out that in the metropolitan area there also are companies at Brentwood, Cottage City, Boulevard Heights, Capitol Heights, Seat Pleasant, East Riverdale, Berwyn, Berwyn Heights and College Park.

Warn of Insurance Increase.

Taking the opposite view, advocates of the fire departments pointed out last night that the insurance rates in these towns would be doubled if it were not for the departments. This view also was voiced by Capt. Vinton D Cockey, one of the five county commissioners.

W. R. Beattie, president of the Bladensburg fire department, pointed out it would cost the county approximately $80,000 or $100,000 a year if it attempted to set up a centralized paid fire department.

Other fire department officials charged that the larger towns were sponsoring the idea of consolidation. It was said they were dissatisfied because smaller companies were receiving more of the appropriations—a move to bring the smaller companies up to par.

Works Bill Schemers Whoop It Up; Are Long, Coughlin Targets? A Pink Slip Problem.

By Raymond Clapper

Trouble clouds are coming up in both houses of Congress. The prairie "wild boys" are preparing to go into action.

Bonus talk already has become menacing to the Administration plans, and all sorts of schemes are being trotted out as prospective riders on the works-relief bill. The idea is that anything which can be hooked onto it will be safe on the theory that Mr. Roosevelt will not veto this $4,880,000,000 relief measure.

He has staked so much on the measure that it makes a natural target for those who can not get their bills through except by the trick of hitching them to something that is destined to go through.

In addition, three moves potentially dangerous to the Administration are about to be made in the House. Petitions are shortly to be offered to force action on the Patman bonus bill, the Lemke farm mortgage moratorium bill and the McLeod bill to pay off frozen bank deposits. The Administration is opposed to all three. They have been bottled up thus far. But under the new House rule any member, 30 days after he has introduced a bill, can seek direct action by obtaining 218 signatures. In the previous Congresses only 145 signatures were required to force a vote on any measure.

Even if these measures should pass the House it is a safe bet that none could pass the Senate as of today. However, the power of propaganda from back home has demonstrated in the World Court defeat that anything is possible.

Is the Administration preparing to open up on Huey Long and Father Coughlin?

Assistant Secretary of Commerce Dickinson, in a speech in New York yesterday, mentioned no names but he obviously was going after Senator Long and his "Share Our Wealth" platform when he condemned the "dangerous bait held out which regards the national wealth as an accumulated hoard that can be divided up and shared like a great pudding," especially "when backed with the ruthlessness which in other countries has bred dictatorships."

He appeared to be talking about Father Coughlin when he referred to one of the chief "public passion-mongers" operating "under the cloak of * * * religion," and remarked that he felt "honored by abuse from such a source."

Dickinson has not been regarded as an Administration spokesman and his address may be a strictly volunteer effort, although it was mimeographed and distributed by the Department of Commerce to give it the widest publicity. When an Administration has a particularly hot potato on its hands the usual strategy is to wheel some of the subordinate officials into action to deal with the object of its displeasure.

* * * *

Another legal problem may soon confront the Government, arising over the "pink slips" which must be filed with March 15 income tax returns and which eventually are to be made public showing the taxpayer's income, deductions and amount of tax.

The Sentinels of the Republic are sending out thousands of small green stickers which read: "I protest against this outrageous invasion of the right of my privacy." The point is that the stickers are large enough to cover the vital figures on the "pink slips."

It is possible that some taxpayers in their indignation will gum the stickers down over the figures, accidentally, of course.

Then will come the question whether the "pink slips" have been returned in accordance with the law. In case of failure to file the "pink slip" statement, the collector is directed to prepare it from the return and add a charge of $5 to the tax.

* * * *

In the search for ways to spend the $4,880,000,000 public works fund, some members of Congress are wondering whether they might not go back to the suggestion which an aluminum official tried out on one sub-committee not long ago.

He proposed an aluminum, streamlined warship. The idea was tossed out in a half humorous way as a suggestion to bring the Navy into line with the trend toward light, streamlined trains. It might be a joke, but some Representatives think that surplus aluminum might as well be used that way as to be junked after first putting it into dirigibles.

Republicans, if they are still interested in such matters, have a chance to pick up a new presidential possibility as a result of the Supreme Court's gold decision—Associate Justice McReynolds, whose stump speech protesting the decision broke all precedents in that quiet, solemn chamber.

True, he is a Tennessee Democrat. But he has qualified for Republican recognition by denouncing the New Deal's gold action as "Nero at his worst." There's a phrase for a Republican keynoter to roll off his tongue.

And where is the former white hope of the party, Justice Harlan Stone, left by the gold decision?

A few months ago he was being talked of as the man the Republicans ought to take off the bench to run for President like they kidnaped Hughes in 1916. Possibly Stone doesn't want to run for President. He did all he could to disqualify himself. His concurrent opinion went further than the majority of the Court in upholding the Administration's gold action. He said Congress had a right to break the Government's promise to pay in gold, the only member of the court to hold that action constitutional. That was further than any of the Democratic member of the court were willing to go.

Further changes are expected in AAA to round out organization improvements sought in the recent purge of the left wingers. One due for promotion to an executive post is Paul Porter, AAA publicity chief, whose services have kept down the volume of brickbats thrown at the agricultural experiment.

President Roosevelt got his daily chuckle yesterday from the observation of Attorney General Cummings after his five-to-four escape from the clutches of the Supreme Court in the gold cases.

"When you go before the Supreme Court," Attorney General Cummings said, "it is like starting a golf match four down and five to go."

Stockholders of Bank Protest Double Levies on Securities

Maryland Commissioner Is Given Till March 6 to Answer Demands.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—John G. Ghinger, State bank commissioner and receiver of the Peoples Banking Co. of Smithsburg, has been given until March 6 to show cause why a petition filed by 40 stockholders asking that an order passed in June, 1933, assessing stockholders in an amount equal to the par value of their shares, be rescinded, should not be granted. The order was signed by Judge Frank G. Wagaman.

The petition questions the constitutionality of that section of the banking law relating to the double assessment on bank stock, on the grounds that the Maryland statutes are discriminatory and "contravene the provisions of the constitutions of Maryland and the United States."

It is alleged further that the court order requiring each to pay the receiver an amount equal to the par value of the stock was passed without opportunity to petitioners to intervene.

The company was taken over by the Central Trust Co. of Frederick shortly before the latter and its branches were closed.

Capt. Daffan Resigns From National Guard

His resignation leaves Second Lieut. M. L. Bolling as senior officer. Other officers are Second Lieut. George B. Thompson and Jessie M. Gregory.

Deer Outside the Door! They Get Hungry, Too

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—For the first time in many years wild deer have left their mountain fastness and wandered into the valley during the last two weeks. The deer are believed to have been forced into the valley because of deep snow and inability to find food in their usual haunts.

Mrs. John Conley, Williamsport, looked out her kitchen window and saw a fawn cavorting about the field next to the Williamsport High School building, while persons in the Old Forge section have been feeding two deer, both does, which have been seen in the W. R. Itnyer woods.

Dealers' Group Asks Changes In Liquor Laws

Legislation Is Proposed Before Prince Georges Delegation.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Proposed legislation dealing with changes in the county liquor laws and revisions in the town charters of Riverdale and Takoma Park were discussed last night at hearings before the Prince Georges County legislative delegation.

The legislative committee of the Prince Georges County Retail Liquor Dealers Association appeared with a program designed to amend to a marked degree the measures passed by the special session of the Legislature in 1933.

Lawrence Whalen, of Brentwood, spokesman for the group, outlined the proposed changes, which included correction of the price differential maintained by Maryland wholesalers in selling to Washington and county retailers, prohibition of the sale by package of less than one pint of liquor, a single license system, refusal to issue licenses to chain stores and making the possession of more than two quarts of untaxed liquor prima facie evidence of intent to sell.

Explaining the difference between prices charged to Washington and county dealers by Maryland wholesalers, Whalen pointed out an example where a case of liquor was sold to the former at $14.05 and to the latter at $17.80. The State excise tax amounted to only $1.80, leaving a price discrimination of $1.95 in favor of the Washington dealer. Maryland retailers are required by law to purchase from wholesalers in the State. The association representatives suggested elimination of this part of the liquor statute.

Would "End Cheating."

In advocating a single license system, the association group said that it would eliminate much of the cheating and evasion of the present law. It was alleged several "on sale" establishments were selling liquor for "off sale" consumption, while the latter class of stores also was violating the law by permitting drinking on the premises.

Mayor William A. Carson headed a delegation of officials and citizens of Riverdale asking that the town's road law be amended with regard to street improvements. They proposed a bill authorizing the mayor and council to make road improvements at their own discretion, with the cost to be assessed against the abutting property owners, subject to referendum of all the voters of the town. Under the present statute, it is necessary to obtain the consent of the owners of more than 50 per cent of the abutting property.

It was decided after discussion with the legislative delegation to amend the proposed law so that a majority vote of the abutting property owners would make mandatory street improvements.

The Riverdale delegation also requested authority to impose a tax of 5 cents on each $100 of assessed property valuation for maintenance of a garbage collection and disposal system. It was pointed out the 10 cents fire tax in the town will expire automatically next year. The garbage tax would be subject to a referendum.

Opposes Charter Revocation.

A group from Takoma Park, headed by William H. Hutton, asked the delegation to oppose the movement sponsored by the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park and other bodies to revoke the town charter of Takoma Park. The legality of such a move was questioned. Hutton also opposed the proposed institution of a ward system in the town, saying it would work a hardship on that section of the town located in Prince Georges County.

The Prince Georges legislative delegation also has before it for consideration the proposed annexation of Moyer's Park by the Town of Cottage City. A bill has been submitted by the town authorities providing for a referendum by the residents of the proposed addition on the fourth Tuesday in April. A similar measure was passed by a previous session of the Legislature, but the referendum never was held.

Session Weighs Effect of Cold On Peach Crop

Comparatively Light Yield With High Prices Due, Growers Believe.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Extent of the peach damage, from winter-killing, was a usual theme of conversation of West Virginia Horticulture Society recently.

A summary of reports brought by them from all sections runs somewhat as follows:

Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia—Some orchards wiped out by present bud indications; some orchards with as many as 70 per cent of buds apparently unharmed. In general, it seems established that a short crop will be produced this year; but probably more than last year, when the crop was almost completely frozen out.

Roanoke section of Virginia—In very good shape.

Crozet-Timberville section of Virginia—Badly injured, particularly in the Timberville section, where appearances are that there will be fewer peaches than last year's almost total crop failure. Some better located orchards still carrying crops of live buds, however.

Maryland Section.

Hancock (Md.) section—Badly hurt, but some buds left.

Pennsylvania peach belt—Some orchards with good crops in sight, some apparently badly winter-killed.

Delaware and New Jersey—Peaches in both States badly hurt; in some sections totally killed.

Arkansas—Heavy injury.

In general over the East, as in West Virginia, it is safe to say that peaches will be comparatively scarce. Enough damage has been done in the peach-growing sections to insure a light crop; with high prices to be looked for as the natural accompaniment.

Apple Prospects.

Apple prospects have not been changed, so far as seen now, by the intense cold of recent weeks. Buds in some sections probably are damaged, but orchardists are generally expecting a heavy set of buds after the light crops in most orchards of eastern West Virginia last year. The killing of a small per cent of the buds would not materially affect the yield. That a tree heavily budded has ten times the buds needed to set a full crop is an axiom among growers.

Barring unforeseen developments, a considerably heavier crop than last year should materialize on local orchards.

Apartments Damaged In Frederick Blaze

Frederick, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Apartments on the second and third floors of the Frederick County National Bank Building were damaged and one person narrowly escaped injury in a fire of undetermined origin early today.

Paul Roderuck, on the third floor, was awakened by fire in his room. The flames spread quickly to the next floor apartment, occupied by Miss Grace Cutsail. Firemen subdued the blaze in about half an hour.

The patient, a man whose name was witheld, still is kept under the influence of narcotics much of the time, Dr. Bishop asserted, but appears well started on the road to recovery.

Speaker Takes Floor to Fight For Labor Bill

Pelter Flays Present Law for Compensation in West Virginia.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—Proposals for liberalization of the workmen's compensation laws caused heated debate in the House today with the Speaker carrying to the floor his opposition to a pending bill.

"I have but one great interest at this time and that is writing in corrections that should have been made in the compensation laws many years ago," declared Speaker John J. Pelter, a Democrat.

He led a successful drive to send two pending bills—his and one introduced by Delegate Ralph Hiner (Democrat), Pendleton, to committee for comparison and study.

While the House argued, the Senate stumbled on a technicality that caused the failure of a bill by "one-fifth" of a vote.

The parliamentary tangle was on a bill to allow the public service commission to assess utilities companies $230,000 for the next two years to carry on a study of utility rates.

The Senate voted to suspend its rules and pass the bill. Then, an hour later a clerk discovered that to suspend rules, 23 1-5 votes were required—only 23 senators voted to do so. The bill was called back and remains pending tomorrow.

Schwab Faces Call Next Week In Ship Inquiry

Bethlehem Official Will Be Called as a Leading Witness, Say Senators.

(Associated Press.)

Senate munitions investigators made known yesterday that Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. would be called as the principal witness when the committee delves into the affairs of that company next week.

Virtually completed last night was the inquiry into the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. Near the end, committee members considered they had obtained from Homer L. Ferguson, company president, a partial confirmation of their contention that the shipyards knew in advance the warship jobs they would receive on their bids.

Ferguson told the committee he was "fairly sure" he would obtain two airplane carrier contracts from the 1933 program financed by Public Works funds. He denied at once, however, a committee assertion that he was sufficiently sure of it to start ordering material and supplies.

Supplies Ordered, Prober Says.

Stephen Raushenbush, committee counsel, brought a half-dozen officials of the company forward in their chairs when he declared they were "sure enough" of obtaining the carrier contracts at a total bid of $38,000,000 to "order supplies before the bids were open."

"No," chorused Ferguson and his staff, sitting around the head of the witness table.

Raushenbush then introduced a company office notation dated July 21, 1933, saying a deal had been "closed" for $180,000 worth of metal furniture for the carriers, although the bids were not opened until July 26.

Never "Closed" Purchases.

"We never closed any purchases in advance of receiving the contracts," asserted Roger Williams, vice president. "We tried to get firm prices in advance so we would know what the cost would be, but we did not close the deal."

Previously the committee had introduced a letter in which Clinton L. Bardo, former president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., had listed the ships to be awarded to the various companies, although at the time the letter was written, the opening of bids was several weeks off. The committee has contended information on bids has been exchanged by the builders in a scheme for dividing the work according to their needs. This has been denied repeatedly by the builders.

Admits Understanding.

Ferguson said, however, it was "generally known" who would get certain of the jobs and particularly understood that his company would obtain the airplane carrier jobs, since the company was then completing such a ship and knew costs, designs and methods better than other yards.

Examination of Newport News is scheduled to end today. After hearing a representative of the Navy Department tomorrow, Secretary Ickes is expected to appear Friday to detail the amount of public works funds given the Navy Department.

What lines of inquiry the committee will pursue when Bethlehem Co. officials go on the stand Monday were not disclosed.

Preparation Made By Fishing Crews

Hundreds Ready for Work in Northern Neck Area.

Heathsville, Va., Feb. 19. (Spl.).—Hundreds of men have returned to work in the Northern Neck area of Virginia.

Preparation for the early run of shad and herring was delayed on the Potomac and Rappahannock Rivers and other tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay because of the extended freeze. The rivers are clear of ice now and the fishermen have taken on their crews and started driving stakes, tarring nets and making other preparations for the season, which opens in March. Northumberland and Lancaster Counties, in the lower part of the Northern Neck, are the principal fisheries counties in this section.

The spring pound net fishing in these waters end about June 1. Buy boats from Crisfield, Md., Baltimore and Washington, and truck buyers from Richmond and other nearby cities provide an ample market for shad and other fish caught.

U. S. Turns Out Opening Issue Of Baby Bonds

Distribution Starts Soon, With Sales to Begin About March 1.

The first issue of "United States Savings Bonds"—the new "baby bonds"—were printed at the Bureau of Engraving yesterday under the watchful eye of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

First delivery of the new bonds will be made within a few days. They will be distributed to 14,000 postoffices throughout the land, where they will go on sale on or about March 1.

The "baby bonds," about 8 inches square, are to be issued in five denominations, ranging from $25 to $1,000. The $25 bond will sell for $18.75 and the $1,000 bond for $750. They are payable in ten years, yielding about 2.9 per cent interest compounded semiannually.

The face of the bond carries a table showing the redemption value of the bonds at any time. The $100 bond, for instance, increases in value $1 every six months after the first year and $2 every six months after the seventh year. The other denominations increase in value proportionately.

"In buying a bond," the Treasury explained yesterday, "the purchaser simply pays cash to the postmaster or his agent. The postmaster then writes on the face of the bond the name and address of the owner, the date of issue and the date of sale.

"No bond will be valid unless it bears these notations, and no bond will be payable to anybody but the person whose name appears on it, with the exception of payments to the proper person or agent in case of death or disability.

"Attached to the bond is a stub which the postmaster detaches and forwards to the Treasury Department as record of the sale. These provisions guarantee complete protection to the owner in event of loss or destruction, for he may replace the bond under Treasury regulations."

Woodbine Station Looted by Robbers

Gun Battle With Sleuth in New Theft Along B. & O.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.) Carroll County authorities are investigating a robbery at the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad freight station at Woodbine, where thieves obtained a number of express and freight packages.

Labor Assails Richberg Plan Of 'Neutrality'

Ornburn Flays Nonpartisan Policy, Says Drive for Jobs Is Futile.

(Associated Press.)

Labor bitterly condemned yesterday Donald Richberg's newly pronounced recommendation that future NRA code authorities be nonpartisan.

In sharply critical testimony, L. M. Ornburn, an American Federation of Labor executive, told the House Labor Committee that unequal labor representation in NRA and on code authorities was largely responsible for failure of the Recovery Administration to attain its major objective of reemploying workers.

This fight broke yesterday to add to the Capitol Hill stir which awaits the delivery, probably today, of President Roosevelt's recommendations for extending the Blue Eagle regime for at least another year.

The House committee is considering a measure by Chairman Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, that would split equally between labor and employer representatives the positions on code authorities and boards handling labor problems.

Present NRA Held Futile.

Richberg appeared Monday to assert that bipartisan boards would intensify industry-labor controversies. Members, he contended, should be impartial public figures; otherwise they would be judging their own cases.

Asserting that labor's voice is tolerated, but not given adequate weight, Ornburn declared it a waste of time and effort to look to NRA, as now constituted, to relieve unemployment still existing.

Then, aiming a blow directly at Richberg, now head of the National Emergency Council, he asserted:

"Those who are opposed to labor in the NRA have always been able to depend upon the legal division, formerly headed by Donald Richberg, to render to them such opinions or decisions as would profit the industry in question and permit the continued exploitation of workers.

Charges Codes "Strangled."

"Under the cloak of legalism, that division of the NRA has strangled more forward-looking code provisions than even the Industrial Advisory Board."

Ornburn also criticized with equal vigor S. Clay Williams, head of the National Recovery Board, charging he had held back imposition of a code on the cigarette industry. The labor spokesman, identifying Williams as former vice president of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., asserted:

"With NRA now headed by one of industry's chief night riders, labor can expect increasing doses of fascism from its decisions and activities.

Says Labor Almost Insulted.

"The trend is alarmingly similar to the early stages of fascism in Europe where labor was first baited with promises, such as the NRA, and then suppressed.

"That the continued stewardship of the NRA in the hands of a former president of one of the most unconscionable, callous and arrogant industrial units in this country seems almost to be a studied, and certainly is a standing insult to labor."

The A. F. of L. has asked the President to remove Williams, but the request was turned down.

Luray, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Nancy Parks and her son, Haller, were held here today charged with burning a house to cover thefts from it, despite a tearful plea for the woman's liberty by another of her children.

Isaac Parks, 8, promises to "turn straight" if his mother is released, Commonwealth's Attorney Lynn Walton said. He quoted the lad as saying:

"Please don't take my mummie to jail and I'll never steal any more."

Walton said the mother and older boy confessed to him that they had fired a tenant house owned by John Stinz, of Washington, to hide the discovery that it had been robbed. Walton said he found the family in abject poverty when bloodhounds led the officers from the burned building to the Parks home.

A quart of flour and a small piece of pork was the only food in the place, he said. The family of six persons has been receiving $4 per month from county relief funds.

Smoker's Throat? That's a Warning!

Get it back quickly, and safely, with LA LASINE ... the DOUBLE-ACTION Antiseptic

After a session of excessive smoking you notice two things. An unpleasant taste in the mouth ... evidence of blackish-brown stained mucus. Both are warnings.

For the result of over-indulgence in smoking is that the mucous glands are clogged with tiny particles of carbon and deposits of "tobacco tar." Irritation follows—may weaken tissue so that germs breed rapidly ... too rapidly for Nature to kill them with her own antiseptics. Then the bacterial count of the entire mouth is thrown out of balance. Sore-throat cold, perhaps bronchitis may follow.

Do this ... Insure Protection and Throat Ease

Gargle with La Lasine, mixed 50-50 with water. Or, if you prefer, use it full strength. Double-action results. The antiseptic foam of La Lasine surrounds the irritating particles. Your mouth feels clean as you expel them. At the same time, special La Lasine membrane-restoratives bring back to par the salivary glands. They release their antiseptic enzymes and ferments—increase mouth cleanliness. The bacterial count of your mouth returns to balance.

La Lasine is safe—even if swallowed. It is used full strength in open wounds. Economical, the $1 size makes 2½ pints. La Lasine International, Inc., New York.

Gargle with La Lasine every day ... Keep sore throat, bad breath and smoker's throat away!

'Quit Stalling,' Mystery Note In Bomb Urges

But Strange Message Not Intended for Huey, Probers Think.

The "bomb" which missed Huey Long by more than 200 miles and then didn't explode has developed into a real mystery.

The peculiarly written message which was found within the package opened by the Louisiana Senator's secretary Monday has supplied a strange twist to the affair.

As translated by War Department experts who say the writing was a combination of Greek, Yiddish and Turkish words, the note said:

"Quit stalling around and send Moor AR. In my opinion now is the time to strike. Send AR here instead of Portland, Less danger suspicion. (signed) MIFN."

Investigators said that they did not believe the note was intended for Senator Long because if the bomb had been detonated the paper probably would have been burned.

Department of Agriculture chemists who tried to find what had been in the bottle which was broken were not successful. However, they were satisfied that the content was not nitroglycerine.

Postal investigators are continuing their search for the person who mailed the package from Medford, Oreg. They stated that the four burned matches were probably the core of a make-shift induction coil which was to supply the spark from the battery to the explosive.

The investigators pointed out that the bomb was completely connected when it was received. This would have meant that if the bottle contained an explosive it would have gone off when the maker constructed it. It was said that such bombs usually are made so that the opening of them completes the electrical connection which detonates the explosive.

Strike Truce Irks Insurgents in N. Y.

Walk-Outs Threatened on Dissenters to Pact.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—New York's elevators resumed service today under a six months' truce agreement between the Building Service Employes Union and the Real Estate Board of New York, although insurgent leaders in the union, dissatisfied with the armistice, threatened to continue the strike which was called yesterday.

Sporadic walk-outs were directed at buildings whose owners have not signed commitments to abide by the schedules of the arbitration committee.

Insurgent leaders said that they reserved the right to strike against some 3,000 or 4,000 such buildings.

New Moves Made By Bonus Forces

immediately available for direct relief.

The bonus amendment to the works bill is being held under cover, and advocates on both sides of the Senate aisle, while insisting it will be offered, have declined to disclose the author.

The independent House movt to petition the Patman bonus measure out of the Ways and Means Committee was made in the face of assurances by leaders that the committee will give every consideration to the bill. Patman, whose cash measure is rivaled in the House by an American Legion bill, leaving methods of financing up to the Treasury, said he wants to be "doubly sure" his proposal is not lost in the shuffle.

Senator Tydings said the bill he introduced in the Senate yesterday was drawn without any aid from the Administration other than statistics supplied by the Veterans' Administration.

Plan on Bonds.

Face value of bonds he proposes to issue in paying the bonus, would equal, including principal and interest, the face value of adjusted service certificates outstanding, except where vetrans hav borrowed on them. In the latter case the Government would pay off the loan and the interest due, then give the veteran bonds less that amount.

As Tydings explains it, bonds would be issued "in the sum of the highest multiple of $25 which, added to the interest on the bonds and the indebtedness on the certificate, is contained in the face value of the certificate." The balance would be paid in cash.

For example, in cases where no loans have been made, a veteran having a bonus certificate valued at $260 in 1945, would receive a $200 bond, on which $54 in interest could be collected when due. The balance of $6 would be paid in cash.

A bonus test on the works and relief bill is expected to follow disposition today or tomorrow of the McCarran prevailing wage amendment. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, yesterday pleaded with the Senate to accept the works bill, with the McCarran amendment, displacing the "dole." He drew a charge from Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, that labor is trying "to wreck this program."

Attorneys Lay Mellon Tax Bill To Cummings

Seek to Prove Assessment of $3,089,000 Forced by Cabinet Member.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 19 (AP).—Attorneys for Andrew W. Mellon sought by testimony today to prove their contention that Attorney General Homer S. Cummings forced the $3,089,000 extra income tax assessment against the former Secretary of the Treasury.

Charles D. Russell, the first witness called at a hearing before the Board of Tax Appeals, testified that—for the first time to his knowledge—an assistant in the Attorney General's office had passed upon and initialed the letter notifying Mellon of the assessment covering his 1931 income.

Throughout proceedings, instituted last March, the banker has charged the Government with "political persecution."

Questioned by Hogan.

Questioned by Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for Mellon, Russell identified the initials, "F. J. W." on copies of the letter brought from his files as those of Frank J. Wideman, an assistant United States Attorney General.

Hogan also charged the banker was not given the customary 30-day notice before deficiency in his 1931 income tax was formally announced, but the Government attorneys attempted to show notice was unnecessary, because of prior personal conferences between D. D. Shepard, Mellon's tax lawyer, and revenue bureau officials.

Russell testified under examination by Hogan that the reason the papers were taken to the Attorney General's office before the reassessment notice was merely "to let them know we were prepared to proceed."

Mellon Contention.

Mellon contends not only that he owes the Government nothing in delinquent taxes, but that he has $139,000 coming because he overpaid his taxes.

The present hearing is on Mellon's petition for a redetermination. In his petition he asserted the Government "would not have made the determination (for alleged delinquent taxes) nor issued the notice except for the fact that the Attorney General directed such to be done."

The letter in question was dated March 19, 1934, two weeks after Attorney General Cummings announced he was going to ask a grand jury indictment on the wealthy banker, who replied immediately he had not even been notified his income was a subject of investigation, "as was usual under the procedure."

Subpenas Quashed.

The board quashed Government subpenas on two Mellon banks. Ernest H. Van Fossan, conducting the hearing, said the subpenas were "too broad" and were improperly drawn, but that attorneys still might draw others when they like.

Robert H. Jackson, Government counsel, had asked for a host of records, saying he wanted them to prove his charge the banks were a "huge tax mill fraud."

The Government charges stock transactions by which Mellon allegedly avoided payment of taxes would be shown by these records.

Lawyer Compiled Return.

Howard M. Johnson, Mellon's financial secretary, took all the blame for compiling Mellon's 1931 income tax return.

He said he took the report to Washington on March 14, 1932, and found great confusion at Mellon's apartment because his employer was packing for a trip to London.

He said he had only a short time with Mellon. The Secretary made a cursory examination of the report and signed it on his assurance it was correct, Johnson added.

Mellon had resigned as Secretary of the Treasury then and was heading for London to become Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

The hearing, which is expected to last from three to six weeks, will recess after Thursday until Monday.

Gift Due to Make Capital Art Center

leries under Government control, the Freer Gallery, a private gift, and a gallery now known as the National Museum. This latter is in reality only a wing of the Natural History Building of the Smithsonian Institution, and various other sections of the building where great paintings and valuable sculptures form a background for the skeletons of dinosaurs and the fossilized remains of other prehistoric animals.

These two galleries were made possible by action of Theodore Roosevelt in accepting art gifts in the name of the Government. Since they were established other gifts have been received. Many of them have been stored because there was no place in which they can be exhibited. Some of the Government's most valuable art objects are in packing cases and crates in the Smithsonian basements.

Custodian of Gifts.

It is anticipated that the Smithsonian Institution will be the custodian of the Mellon gifts, but in addition it is expected a special committee will be named to pass on further acquisitions. It is reported that Mr. Mellon expects to present the Government with $50,000,000 in paintings, building and cash for future acquisitions.

In the absence from the city of Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian, Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary, issued the following statement in reference to the Mellon announcement:

"The announcement that the magnificent art collection of Mr. Mellon is to come to Washington is most gratifying not only to the Smithsonian Institution, but to all lovers of art in the country. It appeals to those interested in our Capital and to every patriotic American who desires to see here a mecca for all that is good in the culture of our great Nation.

"That Mr. Mellon's collection includes canvases of the highest importance is scant expression of the case. His paintings have been gathered with discrimination and come from the best that has been available. His gift will be not only one of transcendent importance in itself, but will inevitably lead other public-spirited patrons of art to make this city the permanent home of their treasures.

"The plan in general for the permanent establishment of Mr. Mellon's collection here has been known for some time. While I have not seen the text that is the basis for the public announcement, the outline as presented in the press is exceedingly gratifying.

"The value of Mr. Mellon's great benefaction to the people of America can not be overestimated."

The purchases of Fords so far have been made without the benefit of this ruling. All, however, were said to have been approved by the office of the Comptroller General. The Comptroller was described as believing that the company had adequately represented that it was following the code's mandates.

The Interior Department's purchases were reported made partly on the basis of a telegram from the Ford company, which was accepted as evidence of compliance. The Department of Agriculture, it was said, proceeded on a similar basis with the Comptroller's approval.

resolution to be heard, but he was shouted down on a point of order.

The local phase of the Morris resolution called for an investigation of contracts which the city has entered into with the General Builders Supply Corporation "or any subsidiary thereof, or with any firms in which the Postmaster General has been or may be interested."

In a statement, after his resolution was tabled, the Republican alderman charged the Builders Supply Corporation was shown favoritism in the award of contracts because of Farley's reputed connection with it.

Records Under Scrutiny.

The aldermanic relief investigating committee denied published reports it planned to look into the affairs of the General Builders Supply Co.

It was disclosed, however, that the legal staff of the investigating committee had obtained the records covering the dealings of the department of purchase with the supply company on cement purchases.

Meanwhile, surrounded by heavily armed guards, Senator Huey Long—denied Federal patronage by President Roosevelt's Administration—flayed Farley in New York.

Hair tousled as usual, in a bed he thought so comfortable he considered buying it, and attired in brilliant pajamas, the resplendent Huey said: "Inasmuch as you have been having many of my letters intercepted, and have opened much of my mail for the past year to so, I now give you authority to open all packages addressed to me."

Long Cautious.

Over the week-end, while Huey was in a midtown hotel in New York, a "bomb" was mailed to his Washington office. Despite his joking about the "bomb," the Senator was registered in one room and occupied another.

He said his visit to New York was not to collect information on Farley's business activities.

Meanwhile, in Washington Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department announced there had been no investigation of Farley by the division of investigation, but that a report on the James Stewart Co., in which Farley was formerly interested, would be sent to the Senate.

market, and that when the foreign investor, even if he be a sovereign, entered the American market to purchase such bonds he had to assume all the risk taken by American citizens.

Nevertheless this may be a question propounded to the Supreme Court for a decision, unless the right to sue the Government over the gold clause is withdrawn. The State Department yesterday sent to all American Embassies and Legations copies of the Supreme Court rulings to be submitted to foreign governments for their information.

Geneva Hails Ruling.

There is no doubt of the deep interest which foreigners have shown in the gold rulings. At Geneva the decisions were regarded as steps toward world stabilization. Prof. Gustav Cassel, outstanding Swedish gold and monetary authority, was quoted by the Associated Press as terming the decision significant as regards the duty of a government to fulfill its obligations. He indicated that the importance of the decision is not yet fully apparent.

The latter view was widely held in this country, especially among those who were displeased with the court's rulings and who held that it opened the way for the Government to repudiate any obligation which it finds inconvenient to fulfill. The court rejected such a theory, holding repudiation by the Government can not be made legal. But it held no damages had been shown by the Treasury bondholder in the case.

The question of a gigantic Treasury conversion operation of outstanding gold clause obligations appeared answered by the fact that only about one-third of these securities could be called in now. The gold clause obligations outstanding consist of about $11,000,000,000 of bonds and $3,500,000,000 of Treasury notes.

Of the gold clause notes, an issue totaling $416,602,800 matures June 15 next. This issue, now paying 3 per cent, will be refunded, probably at a lower interest rate. But no other notes mature this year. On August 1, 1936, an issue of 3¼ per cent notes totaling $364,138,000 matures. Some of the Treasury note issues do not mature until 1938. None is callable before the maturity date.

Maturing This Year.

Of the gold clause bonds outstanding, only the first and fourth liberty issues mature this year. Of the outstanding Fourth Liberties, totaling about $3,500,000,000 the Treasury in October called about $1,800,000,000 for redemption on April 15. On that date it can give notice for the redemption of the remainder of the issue as of October 15. These bonds now pay 4¼ per cent, and it is expected that 3¼ per cent bonds will be offered in exchange for them.

The outstanding first Liberties total $1,933,000,000. They may be called on March 15 for redemption June 15 or by the giving of three months' notice on any interest date. These bonds pay interest rates ranging from 3½ to 4¼ per cent. In addition to these two war issues, the Treasury could call now an issue of 2 per cent consols and two issues of 2 per cent Panama Canal bonds, totaling less than $700,000,000. Due to the extremely low interest rate on these securities, chiefly held by national banks because they possess the circulating privilege, no thought has been given to recalling them.

Aside from the issues mentioned, no Treasury bond issues become callable before 1940, and one issue does not become callable until 1951. Even though the Treasury should retire all gold-clause obligations becoming due or callable this year, there would remain outstanding approximately $9,000,000,000 of such securities.

U. S. Joins Hunt For Missing Woman

Search Starts for Omaha Manufacturer's Wife.

Omaha, Nebr., Feb. 19 (AP).—Department of Justice operatives tonight enlisted in a hunt for Mrs. Lloyd Skinner, wife of the head of a local manufacturing concern, after she had been missing nearly 24 hours.

Skinner, remaining at his office to await any developments in the search, expressed the opinion that his wife had been kidnaped.

The Federal men said Skinner had no definite information to lead him to this belief other than that she was long overdue at the home of her mother in Kansas City, Kans. She had left early Monday to drive there. She was wearing a $4,000 diamond ring and had $35 in her purse at the time.

13,000 Japanese Hold Land in Philippines

Manila, P. I., Feb. 19 (AP).—At least 13,000 Japanese are concentrated on the rich agricultural island of Davao and control 164,000 acres, Eulogio Rodriguez, Philippines secretary of agriculture and commerce, reported today. He urged immediate steps to solve problems arising from the Japanese holdings.

Rodriguez estimated that of the 164,000 acres, the Japanese hold more than half illegally—through sub-leases of public lands leased originally to Filipinos and Americans.

Vanderlip Asks A 5-Man Board To Rule Money

'Supreme Currency Court' Also Would Control Price Levels.

New York, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Control of both the Nation's currency and its price levels through a Federal monetary authority was proposed tonight by Frank A. Vanderlip, former head of the National City Bank of New York.

Predicting that if Congress makes a wise choice in its present deliberations on monetary problems, "it will prove the true turning point toward a basically sound and permanent economic recovery in America," the veteran banker said that Congress should fix a permanent standard of value rather than a permanent gold weight for the dollar.

The next step, he asserted, should be the creation of an executive authority to provide a mechanism for the management of the currency. The purposes of such management should be: First, to restore the desired price level, and then to keep the dollar always regulated under strictly constitutional powers, so that its value would be stable.

"I would have a Federal monetary authority managed by a board of five men," Vanderlip said, "appointed for life. That board would constitute a supreme currency court, but like the Supreme Court of the United States, its action could not be influenced by the vagaries or caprice of judgment of the individuals. Our nine Supreme Court judges do not declare whether they think a law passed by Congress is a good law or a bad law. They decide whether or not the law comes within the framework of the Constitution.

"Even less would it matter whether the individual judgment of the Federal monetary authority were favorable to increasing or decreasing the volume of currency. They would be compelled to act under the higher power: The edict of Congress, which stated a definite price level which must be maintained.

"When current prices were below that level, they must automatically inflate. If prices rose above that level, they must automatically deflate. There is the bulwark to save us against a runaway inflation."

Six Women May Sit On David Lamson Jury

San Jose, Calif., Feb. 19 (AP).—Women will play a large part, it appeared today, in deciding whether David A. Lamson is guilty of the campus murder of his attractive young wife, Allene. Six women and six men were tentatively chosen as jurors with the trial in its second day.

It is the second time the former sales manager of the Stanford University Press has been on trial for the death of his wife in their campus home Memorial Day, 1933. The jury in the first found him guilty. He was sentenced to hang, but the State supreme court ordered a new trial.

$25,000 'Paid' To Kill Daiches Gunman Says

Says Bakery Owner Hired Killer in $300,000 Insurance Plot.

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—An amazing story of how a bakery-chain owner allegedly paid $25,000 for the murder of an advertising executive in a $300,000 insurance plot was related from a criminal court witness stand today.

Walter Murphy, hoodlum, who admitted he had been hired to execute the slaying but who insisted he had sublet the "contract" to the actual assassin, made the recital before a spellbound crowd.

He was the State's star witness in the trial of Irving Weitzman, head of a bakery chain, charged with the murder of Eli Daiches. Daiches' policies were made payable to his firm—the Thomas Bowers Advertising Agency. The defendant's brother, Louis Weitzman, of New York, is chairman of the concern's directorate.

$3,000 Was Murder Fee.

The murder, Murphy swore, was carried out last March 3 on a thronged boulevard by Jerry Pilot, alcohol runner, since slain, for a $3,000 fee.

"Sure, we got him bumped off," the witness said.

Grinning, nonchalant and speaking in the fast patois of the underworld, Murphy told how he and his confederates had trailed their quarry in Chicago and Florida, how Weitzman had made payments of "a grand or two" at a time and how he and his partner, Jack London, now a fugitive, had supervised the execution.

Subjected to cross-examination, the witness admitted he had lied to investigators, that he had been a bootlegger, that he was ensconced in a hotel by the State, and that he expected to avoid a trip to the electric chair through his testimony.

"Gave Me Two Grand."

Murphy said the conspiracy started in September, 1933, when he and London met the defendant.

"Weitzman told us he wanted a man killed," he said. "Weitzman gave men two grand and arranged to 'finger' Daiches."

He recounted how Daiches had been beaten with a pistol butt but survived.

"Weitzman told us that we'd better go to Florida because Daiches was going there and it would be better to kill him there and take the heat off Chicago," Murphy continued. "He said there was $250,000 insurance on Daiches. We registered at a hotel in Miami. We got a telegram from Weitzman that Daiches was at another hotel and we shadowed him but he kept in crowds all the time.

"Around January 20 Weitzman came to Florida and said: 'I'm broke and my brother is broke. I need the money and so does he. You haven't shown any action.'"

Murphy testified Weitzman offered them $6,000 more after they returned to Chicago and told them: "There are some policies due and you'd better get him knocked off as soon as you can."

"That evening," the witness said, "I offered Jerry Pilot $3,000 to knock off a fellow. London pointed Daiches out to Pilot. We prepared to do the job the next day, March 3.

"I got there about 9:30 in the morning. I saw Pilot in a car with another man. When I saw Daiches' car move out, I gave Pilot 'the office.'"

Murphy told how Daiches had been shot to death and added:

"We saw Daiches slumped down in the back. The next afternoon Weitzman gave us the money."

Murphy has been indicted for the murder.

Mrs. Rumsey's Office Goes to Emily N. Blair

Author Made Head of Consumers' Advisory Board in NRA.

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. EMILY NEWELL BLAIR.

Appointment of Mrs. Emily Newell Blair as chairman of the Consumers Advisory Board of NRA to succeed the late Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsay, was announced yesterday by the National Industrial Recovery Board. The appointment was approved by the national emergency committee.

Since the first days of the NRA Mrs. Blair has been an active member of the consumers board and was closely associated with Mrs. Rumsey.

Mrs. Blair was a leader in the suffrage movement and has been active in Democratic politics for many years. She was formerly vice chairman of the Democratic national committee and is well known as a writer, editor and lecturer. At one time she was associate editor of Good Housekeeping.

During the war Mrs. Blair was assistant to the chairman of the women's committee of the Council of National Defense, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw. At the end of the war, she wrote an interpretative report of women's war work which was published by the Government. She has been active in the work of the Federation of Women's Clubs and the National League of Women Voters, appearing before national political convention committees in support of planks in the interest of women in industry and child welfare.

In making the announcement the Recovery Board emphasized its appreciation of the work which has been done by the Consumers' Advisory Board.

"The National Industrial Recovery Board," the announcement said, "expects the Consumers' Advisory Board to continue a forceful presentation of the way in which the public's interest as consumers is affected by codes of fair competition under the jurisdiction of the board."

Ceylon Bats Meet Lethal Gas Death

Chicago Zoo Birds Killed When Identity Is Found.

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—Without a word, a condemned quartet whose last appeal for life was turned down by Washington, died today in a special lethal gas chamber. They were declared officially dead in 30 seconds.

At their last meal they ate heartily, even though the bananas given them were over-ripe and the oranges off-color. But then spoiled fruit is their natural diet, for the now deceased were the Messrs. Pteropi Poliocephali, commonly known as Ceylon bats.

They died for the sins of their fathers, who received notoriety in days of yore by devastating the orchards of Ceylon. As far back as 1904 the United States had deemed them undersirable immigrants.

The four had entered the land of opportunity under unintentional aliasas and were housed in the Brookfield Zoo when their true identity was discovered.

Zoo officials had become fond of them, but there was the Federal law. Appeals for commutation to life behind Zoo bars failed first with local customs authorities, and finally with James H. Moyle, United States Commissioner of Customs at Washington.

Kennamer Jury Told to Ignore Extortion Plea

'Plot' Prevention Did Not Justify Killing, Judge Says in Instructions.

Pawnee, Okla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Judge Thurmon Hurst late today instructed the Kennamer trial jury that if it believed Phil Kennamer, 19-year-old son of a Federal judge, had killed John F. Gorrell to prevent his kidnaping Miss Virginia Wilcox, it should convict him of murder.

Counsel for both sides will argue their cases tomorrow.

"You are further instructed," Judge Hurst read, "that even if John Gorrell had planned and threatened to kidnap Virginia Wilcox for the purpose of extorting money from her father, and was about to carry such a plan into execution, nevertheless, the defendant had no right to kill him to prevent the plan being carried out."

Exceptions listed were self-defense or insanity. These alone would permit acquittal. The jury was instructed that it could find Kennamer guilty of either murder or manslaughter or acquit him.

Through the reading of the instructions, Kennamer sat with his arm folded across his chest, his face composed.

Both sides rested after Judge Hurst had refused to allow the State to introduce character witnesses for the slain John F. Gorrell, Jr., 23, and had admitted testimony of a Tulsa toxicologist that at least a minute and a half elapsed between firing of the two shots which killed the youth.

Interval in Shots, He Says.

There was a definite interval between the shots, said Dr. C. C. Knoblock, because "there was a clear-cut crossing of one blood stream by another" which had congealed on Gorrell's face.

He displayed pictures of the body of Gorrell, son of a socially prominent Tulsa throat specialist, as found slumped under the wheel of his car in fashionable Forest Hills in Tulsa last Thanksgiving night.

The defendant testified yesterday that Gorrell was shot as they struggled over a pistol. Kennamer said they quarreled when, in a rage born of an unrequited love for pretty Virginia Wilcox, 19-year-old blonde Tulsa oil heiress, he sought to thwart an alleged extortion plot aimed against the girl's family.

Brands Gorrell Gang Leader.

Kennamer described Gorrell as the "leader of a gang of bandits and extortionists" and declared the two shots which killed Gorrell were fired instantly.

Phil planned to "get even" with Miss Wilcox for her indifference, a friend of both Kennamer and the man he is accused of slaying, told the criminal court jury today.

Otto Kramer, 21, was the witness. His testimony brought a quick smile to the girl's face.

their 'phones were being used for illegal purposes, they have relied on my word and immediately destroyed the connection.

"I started this crusade and at the beginning there was the question whether we should nidict the telephone company or try to get them to play ball with me. The legal department now says they have put the fear of God into the commercial department and has them eating out of their hands."

Criticizes Committee Questions.

Appearing somewhat irritated when he resumed the witness stand, the district attorney almost immediately launched into a criticism of the questions asked him.

"Is this an investigation of crime in the District or is it an investigation into the efficiency of the district attorney's office?" he demanded.

Since he has been district attorney his office has begun 1,244 cases and terminated 1,166. Of the latter, 192 have been nolle prossed and convictions obtained in 166, while defendants have won acquittals in 49 cases.

"In what percentage of these cases did you take an active part?" asked Representative Jennings Randoph (Democrat), of West Virginia, committee chairman.

"I took part in two cases," Mr. Garnett said.

These were the trials of Bishop Cannon and Miss Ada Burroughs, told of Kennamer's threatening to kill Gorrell days before the shooting occurred.

The three doctors, agreeing that young Kennamer is not wholly normal, nevertheless rejected the insanity diagnosis given yesterday by Drs. Karl A. Menninger, of Topeka, and E. A. Werner, of Oklahoma City.

Recalls Fitzpatrick Resignation.

Apparently stung by the questions fired at him, the District Attorney brought up the incident which led to the resignation of Mr. Fitzpatrick as assistant district attorney. The only complaint he had received against any of his assistants, he said, was that preferred by Justice Proctor against Mr. Fitzpatrick because the latter had objected to further postponement of the Bucculo murder trial. Asked if he had received other complaints, he said:

"Now and then some litigants have complained but I pay very little attention to them."

With the exception of the numbers game, existing District laws are sufficient to cover every crime, Mr. Garnett said.

Names of cases which have attracted wide public attention, "big shots" in the gambling racket and prominent attorneys were brought into the hearing. Among attorneys prominent in criminal practice in the District he named Harry Whelan and W. B. O'Connel, James A. O'Shea, Charles Ford, Robert I. Miller, and added, "I could name others if I took time. These are just as they occurred to me."

his secretary, and the Bucculo murder case.

"What were the outcomes of those cases?" Mr. Randolph asked.

Mr. Garnett replied that all the defendants had been acquitted.

Chairman Defends Procedure.

The district attorney's protest against the line of questioning drew from Representative Randolph the statement that the committee "is engaged in a general investigation of all law enforcement agencies and is seeking to get a general background and knowledge of their functioning.

"The committee," the chairman added, "has been asking questions which it considers only fair and proper."

"The figures you have given the committee show, do they not, that you have nolled more cases than you've won by trial?" asked Mr. Fitzpatrick.

"Yes," Mr. Garnett agreed, "but there were less nolles last year than in any past five years.

"If I'd known there was to be an inquisition here into the district attorney's office, I would have brought along my chief clerk to supply figures," he added.

When asked about Police Court warrant procedure, he said:

"Frankly, I don't go in Police Court at all."

Belgian Premier Supported.

County Police Bill Ready for Nice

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—The bill placing the Montgomery County police force under the merit system cleared the last hurdle of legislative channels tonight when the Senate concurred in a House amendment. The measure will now go to the Governor for his approval.

Senator Stedman Prescott introduced the measure which increases the force to 30. It made rapid progress through the Senate as well as the House. Although the latter amended it by reducing the salaries of the police chief to $2,500.

Another measure also passing the Senate and now ready for the Governor's action is the House bill authorizing Frederick City to issue $35,000 bonds to redeem a loan floated in 1910.

Dr. McClure, Educator, To Speak Here Tonight

Dr. Worth McClure, superintendent of schools of Seattle, Wash., will speak tonight at 8 o'clock at Central High School on "Significant Trends in Public Education." His address will be part of the annual program of the institute arranged by the advisory council of teachers.

The address will be given at 3:45 p. m. today at Dunbar High School for colored public school teachers.

'The Best Dog Is'—a Chihuahua

This Toy Breed Goes Everywhere—Into Places Forever Taboo to the Ordinary Canine—Which Is Why Their Owners Root for Them.

Chihuahuas snuggle into Pullman cars, hotel suites and restaurants—places that are taboo to the ordinary dog. And that is why Mrs. John P. Jackson, wife of a retired captain in the Navy, prefers the Chihuahua to any other breed. She can always have her pet with her.

This breed may be small but they are expensive and rare. "I decided that I just must have a Chihuahua when I saw the one that belonged to a friend of mine in Philadelphia. I knew I really shouldn't afford one, but I went without everything for three months until I had saved up the purchase price of Chiquita," Mrs. Jackson told The Post reporter, who called upon her at her home, 2840 McGill terrace. At that time, Chiquita could sit in a tea cup quite easily, but now that she is a full-grown young lady of a year and a half, she weighs all of 2 pounds.

"She is something I never have to leave at home," Mrs. Jackson said. "I can slide her into my muff or under my coat and take her on Pullmans or into restaurants. She is crazy over my husband and my son. During dinner Chiquita usually sits right inside my husband's coat."

Mrs. Jackson, like all rooters for toy breeds of dogs, denies that her Chihuahua is one bit more delicate than her old Boston terrier. "Chiquita wears a woolen angora sweater when she goes out," Mrs. Jackson said. "That is all the pampering that we give her. And she goes out in any kind of weather. When I take her out in the snow, she falls in and I have to dig her out. I personally think the Chihuahua is a hardy dog. This one eats everything we do, meat and vegetables. There is no special diet for her. Some people think that the breed has no brains because they are so small. But just look at the size of Chiquita's head in comparison to the rest of her. She has a great deal of intelligence."

The Chihuahua is a Mexican dog, named for the northern state of Mexico bordering along the Rio Grande. It is supposed to be the oldest dog in America, having been bred by the Aztec Indians. The outstanding characteristic of the breed is its large ears, held erect and slightly flaring to the side. The standard describes the Chihuauha as a tiny dog, weighing from 2 to 6 pounds, compact, alert and terrier-like. His coat is short, smooth and soft of almost any color, preferably solid or marked, like Chiquita's black and white. He has an apple domed head; large, luminous, dark eyes, and a short, moderately pointed nose. His body is compact, short coupled but slender, well ribbed, tucked up in the loins, and deep-chested. The legs are slender, well sinewed, with small dainty feet and strong, moderately long nails. His tail is fairly long and carried cycle-shaped.

Air Lines Urge Legislation To Prevent Financial 'Ruin'

Commerce Commission. As chairman of the House Postoffice Committee, Mead said that he hoped to have the committee approve the measure this week.

He said that while it was not an "Administration" bill, it embodied recommendations of the Aviation Commission and of the Postoffice Department and the I. C. C.

Mead's bill would allow the Postmaster General to "grant an extension of any route, for a distance of not in excess of 150 miles, and only one such extension shall be granted."

Provides 32,000-Mile Route.

It provides for 32,000 miles of air-mail routes. At the present time the law limits the Postmaster General to payment on 29,000 miles of airways.

The Aeronautical Chamber's figures, on which the appeal for immediate legislation was based, were obtained from air-mail companies' reports to the Postoffice Department on 29 of 33 air-mail routes. It was the first time a consolidated financial statement of the air mail-passenger lines had been drown up.

Temporary contracts under which the mail now is being carried expire in three months. The transport industry represents an investment of more than $25,000,000, according to chamber officials. Approximately 10,000 make their entire living as employes of the companies, while more than 200,000 are indirectly involved.

Investment of Operators.

"Investment of domestic air mail operators range from $6,000,000 by one of the larger companies to $20,000," the chamber's statement said. "During the past seven and a half months four routes showed a combined profit of $28,000. One of the larger companies lost approximately 25 per cent of its entire capital and two other large operators 13 and 10 per cent, respectively, of their total investments.

"Several of the smaller operators are suffering proportionately greater losses. One operator, with an investment of $93,000, lost his entire capital and $700 additional. Another mail carrier with an investment of $102,000 lost half of this in the same period," officials added.

The chamber's statement pointed out that one of the largest companies now carrying mail has on hand only sufficient cash to continue in business four months. Figures submitted by operators flying 70 per cent of the total air mail mileage reveal that continuation of the present air mail rates will result in losses to operators of approximately $5,000,000 in 1935, according to air line officials.

Number of Planes.

The major air line operators fly proximately 500 planes. Roughly half of these are new high speed type equipment, considered by many military officials as forming, together with the air line pilots, an important military reserve.

Meanwhile Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Committee, called at the White House yesterday to urge President Roosevelt to adopt a policy of competitive bidding in the procurement of military planes.

McSwain said he called at the White House because the report of the Federal Aviation Commission to the President had recommended private negotiation in airplane deals.

The chairman of the Military Committee stated that he favored a second five-year program of acquiring aircraft with a 4,000 plane total as the goal. The first five-year program is now "four years behind," he remarked.

Exhorted to Plant Trees Immune to Ravages of Japanese Beetle.

Approximately 100 nurserymen, convening for their annual short course at the University of Maryland yesterday, were exhorted to plant trees immune to the ravages of the Japanese beetle as a means of combating the increasing pestilence.

Dr. Ernest N. Cory, State entomologist, listed more than 60 trees and plants which he said were immune to the beetle. He urged that these be used for replacements in future plantings.

The trees most seriously attacked, he said, were the European white birch, ornamental cherry, elm, horse chestnut, basswood, linden, Lombardy poplar, ornamental plum, sassafras and willow. Damage by the insect is being severely felt in the northeastern part of Maryland, he declared.

Dr. Harry J. Patterson, director of the College of Agriculture of the university, welcomed the men to the campus. He pointed out that a new arboretum is being established at the university under the supervision of the department of floriculture and landscape gardening.

$318,131,482 Set for Army In Huge Budget

House Measure Calls for $62,583,335 Jump for War Dept.

the House that the committee had not provided a $46,250 increase outright.

For rivers and harbors and other non-military activities of the War Department, the 1936 measure carried $60,567,966, a $134,878 cut under 1935.

The $40,000,000 to be provided the Army and Navy from recovery funds is to be used by the former for building and by the Navy for an airdrome in Hawaii.

The committee authorized the Army to contract for 547 additional planes at an estimated cost of $7,686,753. It was explained 450 planes for the regular Army and 19 for the organized reserves would be for replacements during 1935, at the end of which 1,367 will be on hand. The new machines would raise the total to 1,445.

New Airplanes.

The Air Corps as a whole drew $45,600,444, as compared with $26,376,490 this year. The committee explained the increase was "for expansion in various directions, but very largely for new airplanes." Provision was made to increase pilots' flying hours from 225 to 300 a year, as recommended by the Aviation Investigating Board headed by Newton D. Baker.

The committee said frankly it was proposing "to pinch off a little sooner than otherwise would happen the lighter-than-air activities in the Army, apart from free balloons." Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, as chief of the Air Corps, told the committee "We have practically abandoned them in the Army," and the committee observed "the enlisted personnel and the funds, in the committee's judgment, would be better employed in the heavier-than-air branch." No mention was made of the recent crash of the Macon, giant Navy dirigible.

Among the steps taken in the bill to strengthen "weak spots" described by MacArthur were:

An increase of $367,862 to $590,914 for field exercises, including another command post exercise in the Fourth Army on the Pacific Coast; and for the first maneuver of large forces—the 10-day concentration of between 50,000 and 60,000 men, including National Guard troops, of the First Army from New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia around Pine Camp, New York, East of Watertown.

Pay Return.

A final 5 per cent pay restoration totaling $3,215,776.

An increase in the daily food allowance of soldiers to 37.25 cents. (With present rations costing 42 cents it was agreed there probably would be a deficiency to be met later.)

Allowance of $1,000,000 for motorization, mostly for trucks.

An increase of $2,896,890 for the Signal Corps, chiefly for radio equipment for airplanes.

Provision of $350,000 to permit resumption of the national rifle matches, discontinued after 1932.

An increase of $183,996 for the Military Academy, with the suggestion that the Army's request to raise from two to three the number of cadets each Congressman may name to West Point might well be granted.

New U. S. Air Craft Is Urged by Dingell

Construction of an all-metal lighter-than-air craft to replace the wrecked Macon will be demanded of Congress by Representative Dingell, (Democrat), Michigan.

He announced yesterday he believed the Government should build an airship "even larger than the Macon" and insisted it should be patterned after the so-called "tin blimp" ZMC-2, built in 1929 by Detroit interests for experimental purposes.

"The ZMC-2," Dingell declared, "has worn out several motors and still is in every way airworthy."

Road Widening Urged.

Widening of a 7-mile stretch of the road from Henderson's Corner to Damascus, Md., was recommended as an EWA project to the Maryland State Roads Commission yesterday by the Montgomery County commissioners.

Senate Urged To Reconsider Two Treaties

Rescinding of Reservations Sought on Geneva Arms, Pan-America Pacts.

the treaty. The Administration last fall projected at Geneva a treaty for the control and supervision of the munitions traffic far more sweeping than the 1925 pact. For a time it appeared it was pinning its hopes on a new treaty and might abandon the 1925 agreement.

But since Congress convened the American plan for control of munitions manufacture and shipment has encountered some difficulties. So the Administration has returned to its first love. The Senate by an unanimous vote requested the President to return the treaty. As soon as the document comes back to Capitol Hill it is planned to remove the Persian Gulf reservation.

Weigh Reservation Today.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will meet today to consider removing from the inter-American arbitration treaty a reservation attached to it in 1932. Like the Geneva pact, this treaty was not put into effect because of the objectionable reservation.

The inter-American arbitration treaty was negotiated and signed by 20 American republics at the Pan-American Conference here in 1928-29. Under it, the signatories bound themselves to submit to arbitration all disputes arising under treaties which are juridical in nature. Domestic questions or questions affecting the interest of a third State were excluded. This pact would impose an obligation to arbitrate disputes and thus went beyond the usual arbitration pacts or adherence to the World Court.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee proposed, and the Senate approved, two reservations to this treaty. One would require the advice and consent of the Senate to special agreement under which disputes would be submitted. The Hoover Administration objected to this reservation, but the Roosevelt Administration is willing to accept it.

It was the second reservation which proved objectionable to President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull. It made ratification of the treaty subject to the understanding that "the provisions of this treaty shall not be applicable to pending international questions or controversies or to those which may arise in the future relative to acts prior to the date on which said treaty goes into effect, or to controversies arising under treaties negotiated prior to the date on which said treaty goes into effect."

Treaty Nullified, Hull Said.

Under this reservation the only type of disputes that would require arbitration would be those arising new and fresh, without reference to existing treaties, after the treaty becomes effective. Secretary Hull has contended this would leave the treaty virtually worthless, nothing but a gesture.

The Senate committee adopted the reservation in an effort to prevent Panama from demanding arbitration of certain unsolved disputes growing out of the construction of the Panama Canal. Senators feared that Panama would insist on an arbitration of these questions, since she also is a signatory of the treaty.

The committee has made this treaty a special order of business for today.

U. S. Against Curbs In Commercial Aircraft

Geneva, Feb. 19 (AP).—The United States today made plain its determination not to let European war fears interfere with the normal development of American commercial aviation.

Before representatives of the world's powers gathered here under the disarmament conference in an effort to devise an agreement for arms supervision, Hugh Wilson, United States Minister to Switzerland, said flatly the United States can not submit to any harsh supervision of civil aircraft.

Lord Stanhope, British representative, had expressed anew Britain's fear of an assault from the air, indicating her belief that civil planes may be used for military purposes.

"Some powerful civil aircraft are superior to many military machines," the British delegate said, intimating that the United States' civil planes would constitute an aerial weapon of formidable proportions. Any European nation, he added, would gladly exchange its military ships for America's commercial craft.

In replying, Wilson pointed out the vast distances to be covered in the United States and declared America's development of commercial aviation, necessary to the Nation's development, is no war problem.

Commercial vessels may be converted into ships of war, motor trucks may be turned into tanks and "an ordinary citizen can be made into a fighting man," Wilson argued.

Berlin Proffers Moscow Credit Of 80 Millions

Nazis Striving to Prevent Collapse of Export Trade to Soviet.

Berlin, Feb. 19 (AP).—Nazi Germany, seeking to check the collapse of its export business to Russia, has offered Moscow new terms of credit for the purchase of machinery, it was learned today.

The deal, Russians say, amounts to about $80,000,000, and comes at a time when Russo-American trade negotiations have broken down.

Soviet quarters, however, declined to say whether Russia intends to turn toward Germany again now that hope of buying in the United States has been blasted. Both sides expect to reach an agreement soon, however.

The Russian commercial attache was expected to return to Moscow this coming week-end to discuss the German offer with his superiors.

It was understood Germany wants Russia to exchange certain quantities of oil for machinery as part of the proposed deal.

Russia's trade with the Reich has taken a marked drop since the National Socialist Party came into power. The credit offer, Russians say, came from the government rather than from private sources, despite a strong Nazi antipathy toward Communists.

Wales Pays Visit To Riding Academy

Vienna, Feb. 19 (AP).—The Prince of Wales, once famous as a hard, fast horseman on spirited mounts which sometimes tossed him, today visited Vienna's historic Spanish riding academy.

Masters of fancy horsemanship showed the royal visitor around the grounds of the academy where for more than two centuries pedigreed Arabians have been trained.

Meanwhile a throng of Viennese, including 150 art students especially costumed for the occasion, were recovering from the customary morning-after headache, as a result of the "heuriger," which the Prince was scheduled to have attended, last night.

The idea of "heuriger" (this year's vintage) is to drink new wine to old music until an imperfect world loses its rough corners.

The Prince, who was delayed by another entertainment closer to his hotel, did not appear.

of Benita von Falkenhayn and Renate von Natzmer, who were put to death before dawn Monday in the glare of floodlights illuminating old Ploetzenses Prison's courtyard, said yesterday:

"The two women during their last minutes of life never murmured a single word."

Both Outwardly Calm.

Both went to their death with outward calm and bravery, he said, their bodies erect, their heads high.

The execution of the two, charged with betraying Germany's military secrets, took only six minutes, the informant said.

Frau von Falkenhayn was the first," he related. "When she was led into the lights * * * she walked first to the improvised stand for the jury which was witnessing the affair. Both her hands were chained at her back. She stood there and heard once more the verdict of death read aloud by the state prosecutor.

Surrendered to Executioner.

"Bowing before a crucifix on a table, dimly lit by tall wax candles, the prosecutor surrendered Frau von Falkenhayn to the executioner with the words:

"Executioner do your duty."

"Frau von Falkenhayn walked to the block, rigidly erect."

After the executioner, 67-year-old August Griebler, of Magdeburg, and his three assistants beheaded the woman, her body was placed in its simple, black, narrow coffin and Frau von Natzer, noted Berlin beauty, whom the eye witness described as "an extremely good-looking person about 35 years old," went to her death in equal calm.

Sped to Prison.

The informant said the two women, both of whom were employed in the foreign office, were taken to Ploetzenses Prison at 6 p. m., Saturday, "one hour after the death verdict was passed," he said. "Nobody ever dreamed they would be decapitated so soon."

"Not until Sunday night did we learn that the beheading would take place Monday. The executioner and his assistants arrived late Sunday night and the scafford was erected during the night."

Court-Martial Set For Admr. Bailey

Ex-British Attache Here Is Involved in Ship Crash.

London, Feb. 19 (AP).—The British Admiralty today called a public court-martial to try a rear admiral and two captains involved in the collision of two of His Majesty's most noted warships—the Renown and the Hood—off the Spanish coast last month.

The officers ordered to appear are Rear Admiral S. R. Bailey, in command of battle cruisers; Capt. F. T. B. Tower, of H. M. S. Hood, and Capt. H. R. Sawbridge, of H. M. S. Renown. It is the first time since the World War that a rear admiral has been summoned.

The Renown and the Hood collided January 24 in maneuvers. The damage was slight and no one was hurt.

Rear Admiral Bailey was naval attache to the British Embassy in Washington in 1921 and 1922.

Troops Ignored By Ethiopians, Italy Complains

Rome Threatens Stronger 'Precaution' if Border Is Not Neutralized.

Rome, Feb. 19 (AP).—Because Italy's precautionary measures "do not seem to have had any effect on the Ethiopians," it was officially indicated today, stronger measures may be necessary.

A government spokesman, announcing negotiations still are going on at Addis Ababa for preliminary settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian border controversy, accused Ethiopia of trying to impose unacceptable conditions to the agreement.

If those conditions are not withdrawn, he said, "precautionary measures of a stronger nature" may become necessary.

To emphasize his warning, 400 workers—mechanics, carpenters and other skilled laborers among them—entrained for Naples to sail for Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, Italian Colonies in Africa bordering Emperor Haile Selassie's domain.

They follow approximately 2,000 Fascist militia who already have sailed. Some 30,000 regular troops are expected to be en route by the end of the week.

The official spokesman said Italy "suggested to the Ethiopian 'government creation of a neutral zone (in the disputed frontier region) and they have more or less agreed in principle, but with certain conditions."

Britain's Munitions Inquiry.

Great Britain's investigation of her munitions industry will be watched with a great deal of interest in this country. The inquiry in London seems to be a direct outcome of the information revealed by Senator Nye's committee. But there will be notable differences in the approach of the two investigating groups to what is essentially the same problem. It remains to be seen which will contribute more to the attainment of international control over the traffic in munitions of war.

The gratification which is felt in this country over the British investigation is accentuated by the character of the body selected to conduct it. Instead of leaving this important task to a committee of politicians, the British government has organized a royal commission under the chairmanship of an experienced jurist, Sir John Eldon Bankes, formerly lord justice of appeals.

Not a single member of the commission can be classed as a candidate for office. One is dean of law at the University of London; another is J. A. Spender, the well-known editor and historian, while a third is Sir Philip Gibbs, the novelist. One industrialist is included in the group, along with a leader of the Cooperative Society. The other member is Dame Rachel Crowdy, formerly chief of the opium section in the secretariat of the League of Nations.

Obviously this group will conduct an inquiry very different from that which is being pursued by the Nye committee in this country. It will be less concerned with political innuendoes and personal advertisement, more anxious to develop facts bearing upon practical measures for controlling the munitions industry. When its work is completed there is a strong probability that its conclusions will become law. That, rather than publicity during the investigation, will be its aim.

Amazement In Order.

Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., says he was "amazed" when his company realized a profit of 35 per cent, or more than $5,000,000, on the construction of two cruisers for the Navy. He also intimates that a 23 per cent profit from the building of an aircraft carrier came as a pleasant surprise. His amazement, if not his pleasure, is probably exceeded by that of the public.

An emphatic denial by Mr. Ferguson that shipbuilding companies have engaged in collusive bidding on naval craft went into the record of the Senate Munitions Committee. His testimony in this respect does not agree with the implications of data gathered by the committee. Regardless of how these contracts may have been made, however, it is apparent that they were inexcusably weak so far as protecting the public interest is concerned.

The unusual profits realized from construction of the Ranger are ascribed by Mr. Ferguson to an unexpected drop in the cost of labor and materials. A contract properly drawn would have returned at least part of that saving to the Treasury.

It is pertinent for the committee to inquire what would have been the cost of constructing these and similar vessels in the Navy's own yards. Encouragement of private enterprise in the shipbuilding industry is doubtless important from the standpoint of national defense. But that does not excuse the payment of excessive sums for war vessels. A choice between Government construction or more rigid safeguards against unreasonable profits seems to be clearly foreshadowed.

Barbaric.

The world has just been treated to an object lesson of the lack of balance in our so-called civilization. In January, the German and French governments settled the question of the Saar in a dignified and peaceful manner, the ballot supplanting the bullet in the solution of international differences. In February, one of these governments orders two women beheaded on a block under a medieval battle ax.

Of the justice of the death penalty there can be little question. Although the women, members of leading German families and employed in highly confidential secretarial capacities, had been held incommunicado for nearly a year and were granted hearings only before the dreaded People's Tribunal, correspondents are agreed that they were guilty of selling war secrets to a foreign officer sent by his government to obtain military information.

Whether blackmail entered into the negotiations is beside the point. Treason is treason and the penalty is death. The fact that the victims were women undoubtedly accounts for the sudden reaction against the punishment, for the beauteous Mata Hari was executed by a French firing squad and little comment was heard.

No one denies that a state must guard its military affairs with strictest secrecy, particularly in the high-tension European arena. But other continental nations manage to accomplish this without resorting to the headsman. It is not so much the punishment nor the sex of the unfortunates that calls forth the universal protest. It is rather the atavistic implications of the sentence that cause the world to shudder. The vision of the masked executioner, complete in his silk hat, white gloves and full evening dress, and wielding his barbaric ax, has to it something sickening. It is clear evidence that the world can slip backward far more easily than it can forge ahead.

An Improbable War.

The dispatch of Italian troops to that country's East African colonies and limited military preparations by the Fascist government are widely interpreted as presaging war between Italy and Ethiopia, as the remote African empire of Abyssinia is officially known. It is by no means certain that such a war will eventuate. But it is certain that if it comes Mussolini will have taken on by far the toughest job of his dictatorship.

Not by accident has Ethiopia successfully maintained its independence throughout the partitioning of Africa by the European powers. It is an isolated country of desert lowlands and mountainous uplands, difficult of approach, served by a single railroad which terminates in French Somaliland, and inhabited by seven or eight millions of warlike tribesmen who would certainly show unity against any foreign invasion. In modern times Ethiopia has only twice been invaded: successfully by the British in 1868, and very unsuccessfully by the Italians in 1896. At the battle of Adowa in that year a large Italian army was literally cut to pieces, losing some 7,500 in killed and wounded and about half that number in prisoners.

The Italian troops today are not those of 40 years ago, and—given time, indifference to casualties and vast expenditures of money—it is probable that Italy could conquer Ethiopia. To keep this territory, nearly as large as Germany and France combined, under control would be quite another matter. And it is difficult to see how the exploitation of its undeveloped and inaccessible resources could be made profitable for decades to come.

That Italy could gain anything commensurate with the certain cost of the anticipated war is very dubious. The strain upon her none-too-stable finances would be heavy; the danger of encouraging domestic upheaval would be serious. There would be small glory in victories; there would be appalling disgrace in defeats. Moreover, any major disaster would tend to upset the precarious balance by which Mussolini now holds a dominating position in European politics. Undoubtedly his many enemies are not at all averse to the prospective invasion of Ethiopia. They know that the proposition would be very different to that which Japan took on in Manchuria.

The failure of the League of Nations to intervene, as yet, in the controversy is doubtless partly due to a reasonable hope that no such attempt by Geneva will be necessary. If hostilities result, some form of League action will be inevitable, for both Italy and Ethiopia are members. While only an incurable optimist would assume that League pressure by itself could stay Mussolini's hand, he would be hard put to it to prove that invasion is not aggression in violation of the League Covenant. And Italy's diplomatic position is not so strong that she can afford to be pilloried in Europe now as a menace to world peace.

The Fascist temperament enjoys warlike scenes. Beating drums and marching men can even, for a time, divert the Italian population from undue concentration on thin wage envelopes and meager living. They may also bluff the Ethiopians into ceding Italy some few hundred square miles of desert. But before Mussolini actually sends his blackshirts into the perils and privations of a hostile country he will doubtless hesitate long in the quiet of his study. For Il Duce has so far been too shrewd a leader to bite off more than he can chew.

The Capital's Contribution.

Andrew W. Mellon's "cherished dream" of making Washington a cultural as well as a political capital has at last developed from the stage of common report to that of public announcement. To fulfill his generous ambition the former Secretary of the Treasury has already purchased a number of rare paintings, which he has turned over to the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust. This trust he has established for the express purpose of constructing a gallery adequate to house the pieces of art which have been, and may in the future be, accumulated. An immense sum will be spent to add to the advantages of a city already by no means negligible as an art center.

Mr. Mellon's ambitions began to take concrete shape in 1930 when he acquired Raphael's "Madonna and Child." The next year he was able to assemble five of the outstanding pictures from the Hermitage Galleries, founded by Catherine the Great, in what is now Leningrad. The imperishable quality of these paintings goes far toward upholding Mr. Mellon's standard that the projected gallery shall hold only art objects "considered outstanding by connoisseurs."

In planning to make accessible to the humblest citizen the enduring beauty of Botticelli, Titian, Raphael and others, Andrew W. Mellon places not only Washington, but the entire Nation, in his debt. Particularly upon this city such a gift imposes a serious obligation. In the final analysis, neither the finest foreign paintings nor the most beautiful galleries can make of any place a "cultural center." In any expression of culture, the human equation is necessarily an integral part. It is only by appreciative cooperation on the part of capital residents that Mr. Mellon's dream may be realized in its entirety.

On Sharing Wealth.

Political spellbinders, and believers in an economic utopia whose optimism is not tempered by knowledge of economic facts, have acquired a large and enthusiastic following for proposals to redistribute the wealth of the country. Their claims that everybody would be enriched if the wealthy were compelled to share their fortunes with the poor are the more destructive because, by playing upon ignorance, they tend to discourage adjustments that would really benefit the lower income groups.

A large part of the so-called wealth of any country consists of capitalized claims to income, and a pyramiding of such claims results in a gross exaggeration of the amount of real wealth in existence. Even if our national wealth totals $300,000,000,000, as some reliable estimates indicate, equal apportionment of such a sum among 125,000,000 people would yield no luxurious return for each man, woman and child.

To understand the real problem it is necessary to realize that wealth is valuable chiefly because it produces incomes that can be enjoyed. In many cases divided possession of the capital that is the source of national income would actually result in its nonutilization or in very imperfect use, with the result that real income would shrink and the general level of well-being decline.

A large number of people who favor a redistribution of wealth are hopelessly confused as to the distinction between wealth and income. If they perceived that it is the volume of current income that determines the degree of general prosperity or depression, they would understand the futility of efforts to make everybody rich, or at least well-to-do, by a process of division.

The economic adviser to the AAA, Louis H. Bean, estimates that the per capita income of the people of the United States in 1934 amounted to about $412, as compared with $368 in 1933. Even if the national income were to return to the level of 1929 (it was then estimated at approximately $80,000,000,000) it is clear that its redistribution would yield only a modest per capita yearly income.

Undeniably, the present excessive concentration of income in the hands of a small percentage of the population is a hindrance to economic progress. It is a cause of many of the misdirected investment activities that create so-called overproduction in communities where the major cause of distress is really mass underconsumption. However, the problems created by inequality of income are not capable of solution by merely taxing or confiscating the incomes of certain classes and transferring the proceeds to others. A large amount of forced redistribution of this kind is actually going on at the present time, but it does not solve the basic problem of how to create more and better remunerated opportunities to earn incomes. That is the fundamental issue which our social reformers should be considering.

There would be more wealth and more income for all if the workers who create wealth in the first instance could be employed to better advantage. Not confiscation to eliminate existing inequalities, but practical measures to prevent inequalities from becoming so extreme are needed. Even though the workable method of attaining this objective has not yet been discovered, our ignorance is no justification for advocating unsound alternatives that would wreck the system of wealth production which in the past has enabled us to progress to an enviable stage.

Passing Of The Coconut.

England's Forgotten Men are protesting against their government's forgetfulness. England's Forgotten Men are her traveling-showmen who, with their circuses and sideshows, have from time immemorial wandered over the United Kingdom to the joy of even its remotest countrysides.

Convened the other day at historic Caxton Hall, in London, the authorized representatives of this ancient guild agreed that it served a high economic and patriotic purpose by the stimulation of inter-empire trade. Each voyaging show maintains the hoary sport whereat, for a price, adventurous patrons may try to hit a human target with a coconut. But only those coconuts are used which are imported from British overseas possessions. Thus—as was pointed out by that veteran showman, Mr. J. R. Styles—every time a man throws a coconut in England the impact echoes happily in the coconut-groves of the colonies.

All this, however, is now passing. A shortsighted government has clapped down a tax that results in dismally diminishing audiences. "In 1929," said Mr. Styles, "there were 298 native traveling shows touring the British Isles—today there are only 43."

It is well for him to warn against the peril of uprooting such a business. The caravan-circus, its acrobats and its coconut-shies, are woven into the tapestry of English tradition. Time was when England's governments held such English traditions as dear as England's constitution. Time may be when rural England, altogether deprived of its most cherished amusement, will rise in arms to the cry of "Bread and the Circuses!"

"Government officials are taxing our ingenuity," declares a speaker. They won't be able to raise any money on that.

Prophecy Fulfilled?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently I was again glancing through DeTocqueville's "Democracy In America," when I came upon chapter 6 (volume 1), entitled "What Sort of Despotism Democratic Nations Have to Fear."

The chapter opens with:

"I had remarked during my stay in the United States that a democratic state of society, similar to that of the Americans, might offer singular facilities for the establishment of despotism; and I perceived on my return to Europe how much use had already been made by most of our rulers of the notions, the sentiments and the wants engendered by the same social condition for the purpose of extending the circle of their power. This led me to think that the nations of Christendom would perhaps eventually undergo some sort of oppression like that which hung over several of the nations of the ancient world. * * *

"But it seems that if despotism were to be established among the democratic nations of our day it might assume a different character; it would be more extensive and more mild; it would degrade men without tormenting them. I do not question that in an age of instruction and equality like our own sovereigns might more easily succeed in collecting all political power into their hands and might interfere more habitually and decidedly within the circle of private interests than any sovereign of antiquity could ever do. But this same principle of equality which facilitates despotism, tempers in rigour * * *

"The will of man is not shattered but softened, bent and guided: men are seldom forced by it to act, but they are constantly restrained from acting: such a power does not destroy, but it prevents existence; it does not tyrannize, but it compresses, enervates, extinguishes and stupefies a people till each nation is reduced to be nothing better than a flock of timid and industrious animals, of which the government is the shepherd.

" * * * This does not satisfy me; the nature of him I am to obey signifies less to me than the fact of extorted obedience."

This chapter is pertinent to today's changing values. Every citizen should read it. Although it was written about 1835, it applies with even greater force to the United States under the New Deal.

Pigs To England?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with the article in The Post of February 17, signed by Mr. Charles H. Moore, in which reference is made to a reciprocal trade treaty with Brazil, I consider it very clever of Mr. Hull, Secretary of State, to convince Brazil that it is advantageous for them to trade with us because of the fact that we buy coffee from their country.

Coffee is one of the few products that we are compelled to buy outside of our own country, and I hope Mr. Hull will give publicity to the other trade agreements which he consummates and will elucidate the phraseology of such agreements in such language that the fellow in the street can comprehend the meaning—in other words, make it clear just what we are selling and what we are compelled to buy. In this way it may be brought out just how long reciprocity will be endured by the American people.

Mr. Moore refers to the belated recognition by Uncle Sam of the fact that where he sells he should also buy. This idea dates back to the time before the McKinley tariff, when we sold raw materials to Europe and bought back the finished product from them.

Now I should like to ask, Would Mr. Moore like to have us go back to selling pig iron and buying the finished product from England and thereby causing our own mills to close down? R. C. G.

Women Who Cried.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: My appreciation to B. B. J., who brought Miss Schuman, "The Star of Utrecht," to my attention through a letter in The Post. She is an earlier feminist than Mary Wollstonecraft, an English author, who stands out in the eighteenth century as a pleader for her sex. One of the Wollstonecraft books is included in the Susan B. Anthony collection, now on display in the rare book section at the Library of Congress.

Miss Anthony eagerly read everything she could get that was written by earlier women "crying in the wilderness," and spoke of them reverently in the Harper biography.

Will you write to me in care of The Post, B. B. J.?

Clings To Shirt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note from The Post of February 16 that Housing Administrator Moffett says that we are out of the depression and don't know it.

Will someone please advise President Roosevelt of this before the tax collector gets my last shirt? W. C. THOMAS.

Death And Education.

There is one factor—and a factor of tremendous importance—to consider in any campaign for traffic safety, R. H. Peters points out in the current Forum. That is the education of the driver: in short, the human factor. Latest available figures show that almost two-thirds of our accidents are the direct result of driving errors. Exceeding the speed limit accounts for no less than one-fourth of them. Right on the heels of the speedy driver as cause of accidents is the driver who does not have the right of way but takes it regardless. Eliminate the two of them and you eliminate the cause for exactly one-half of our highway mishaps.

Already schools in New York and New Jersey are preparing their pupils for driving. And accident figures give reason enough for such courses. Youth with a motor car is one of our greatest single threats to life. During 1933, drivers between 18 and 24 were responsible for no less than 22.5 per cent of all of our automobile accidents. And they were responsible for 27.4 per cent of our traffic deaths. Drivers under 18, of whom there should be few, if any, were the direct cause of 830 deaths in 1933, and their death ratio was 62 per cent higher than the general average. In all, 10,900 persons were killed in 1933 by automobiles operated by drivers under 24 years. And no less than 260,000 accidents were caused by these same youthful motorists.

"Two Vicious Systems"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in today's issue entitled "Attack Is in Order," in which you criticize the "spoils" patronage system, is indeed interesting, both because of what you say and because of who says it. Frankly, I have no sympathy with what is purely the spoils system.

On the other hand, I do not relish the idea that it is only the Democrats that should be afflicted with religion when they happen to get in power and therefore should eschew all things political in the matter of filling offices. It has been my observation that the Republicans have not heretofore been so considerate as to give a Democrat time to change his clothes before kicking him out of office when they came into power. Of course, it is complimentary to the Democrats to insist that they operate upon a higher plane, and there may be compensation in the satisfaction that we have been of exemplary conduct in such matters.

But let's give this matter a little common-sense consideration. In the first place, there is nothing inherently wrong in the fact that a man has had an active political career. Every man of this Administration, from the occupants of the White House, the members of the Cabinet and down to and including the heads of the various new agencies, is where he is by reason of his political activity. Is such reprehensible on their part? No. Nor is it reprehensible on the part of the subordinates throughout the Government. The thing that is reprehensible is the placing of political deadwood in positions of responsibility.

Furthermore, I do not see that it is more objectionable to have the various departments of the Government run as party organizations than to have the same run as private, personal organizations and stacked with the personal friends of the various heads. I have it on reasonably substantial authority that a man of influence in one of the emergency relief organizations got a tip from the head of another such organization that the latter needed 200 employes and that as a result 200 of the personal friends of this inside man got desirable jobs. If I have to choose between the two vicious systems, give me the party system. It is certainly more in keeping with the spirit and ideals of a republic.

Furthermore let's take the Civil Service system and see its inherently weak points. Selections here are made as the result of competitive examinations. The examination discloses the possession or absence of a certain amount of information, and, if the examination is so made, there will be disclosed a certain amount of reasoning powers on the part of the applicant. But the examination does not and can not disclose personality or character. The examination can't disclose whether the applicant has honesty, integrity, honor, industry, loyalty or patriotism, and last, but by no means least, whether or not the applicant has common sense.

Of course, the Civil Service, or merit system, has its good points and should be encouraged. But it has its natural limitations, and there may be substituted for it the "personal, private" spoils system rather than the "political" spoils system. If we must have either, let me have the latter.

The Post Impressionist

Fire-Fighting by Air.

Post Office, Wednesday.

FOREST FIRES, their tremendous cost and the inadequate methods with which they are fought: these were the subject of a recent Column. We mentioned John Edwin Hogg's proposal, in Field and Stream, to combat this menace with Army airplanes and Army guns. And, having consulted with the National Forest Service, we reported that this service said the Army had studied the idea—and dropped it.

But Mr. Hogg hasn't dropped it. He has dropped, instead, an aerial bomb on the Forest Service. He writes to the Column from Alhambra, Calif.

"I have been studying forest fires for many years," says he. "Long ago I came to the conclusion that our methods of fighting them were an aspersion upon human intelligence. The United States Forest Service is hog-tied with red tape and lack of authority. They have no plan of preparedness. They can't even buy a shovel in anticipation, but can spend any amount of money to buy 10,000 shovels and hire as many untrained fire fighters after a fire starts.

"As a result, development of scientific fire fighting is impossible. It is just a case of waiting for a fire to break out and then trying to fight it by the methods of primitive man; repeating the same old mistakes, unable to deviate from their known inefficiency. Nothing can be done to change the situation until change is authorized by legislation.

"I rather think that what may eventually bring this subject to the point of getting something done about it will be the military possibilities of aerial incendiary attack. I have convinced the United States Forest Service, as well as certain officers of the Army and Navy, that a single aviator with 100 pounds of cracked-up phosphorus could turn California into a shambles in about 24 hours. He would not have to be an alien enemy operating from a carrier 200 or 300 miles at sea; he might be a lunatic, a revolutionist or any individual with a grudge against society.

"California, with a dry season nearly six months long, is a veritable tinder box from about mid-June to the end of September. Then every human activity hinges on water stored in the mountain watersheds. Burn off these, and the State would be ruined for a hundred years. And much the same is true of Oregon, Washington and many another forest area."

Mr. Hogg continues:

"Let us suppose that I am an enemy of the State."

He isn't anything of the kind. But that is what he asks us to suppose, anyhow—for the sake of his fire-control argument. And then he goes on:

"It costs me about $100 to carry out my plot. I provide myself with about 100 pounds of phosphorus cracked up in pieces about as big as peas. You know the action of phosphorus; keep it covered with oil or water and it's as harmless as so much gravel; but take a piece of it out of the oil or water, expose it to the air, and it bursts into a sizzling hot flame.

"An hour after taking off from any aviation field in Los Angeles County, I'm high in the air over the Cleveland National Forest, east of San Diego and north of the Mexican border. I dip out the phosphorus. In half an hour the forest is on fire in about 500 different places . . . In about four hours I have fired everything from Mexico to Oregon."

Of course there are such things as anti-aircraft guns—as pursuit planes. But that's not Mr. Hogg's point. His point is that, if people can be made to see how a living enemy may wreak such havoc, then they may be persuaded to a realization of how an aerial fire department may prevent, or at least reduce, the havoc nowadays wrought by merely accidental fires.

"I do not claim that aircraft might be capable of extinguishing a fire after five or six acres have become a roaring inferno," says Mr. Hogg; "but I do claim that airplanes offer the fastest method of transportation to the scene of a fire. If a fleet of planes can attack a fire in its incipiency, can they put it out? If they can't, why build bombing-planes?

"I have discussed this with various Army and Navy officers and have yet to find one who believes it can not be done. I also believe that the most effective fire-fighting 'chemical' would be hydrogen oxide—plain water. A fleet of 100 bombing planes, each carrying two tons, carrying spraying devices, could certainly wet down a circle around an incipient fire of fairly large proportions. This type of attack could be carried out without the slightest danger to men on the ground who are using the old methods."

It seems, then, that the Post-Impressionist's first innocent Column on forest-fires has started a conflagration. We respectfully request the aid of the United States Forest Service.

Few Critical Studies On Mexico's History

A Conscientious Scholar Finds Many Americans Ignorant Of Catholic Philosophy.

By Paul V. Murray.
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

EVERYONE who reads, teacher, student or the ordinary man in the street, has become more and more critically minded with the introduction of the scientific method into every walk of life. Therefore, I should like to see those multitudes who are interested in the present agitation over Mexican affairs apply some of that critical-mindedness when they consult the volumes of the persons usually designated as authorities on Mexican history, life and arts.

Such an attitude becomes a practical necessity for people who would strive for that elusive objective—impartiality. No one of us, for reasons of home background, education, religious affiliations, etc., will ever see the day when he has achieved a strictly impartial attitude, especially on matters which, on the surface at least, seem to require very little thinking to produce correct conclusions.

Let me apply the microscope of criticism to a group of authors whose works continue to be, for many Americans, the chief source of information concerning the past, present and future of Mexico. Like all other strivers after impartiality, I shall fail of my objective; but I hope that my struggles to attain it will prove my contention that much of the present materials which Americans have produced in English cannot be used as the basis for sweeping conclusions which have, in the past, been accepted as the final truth in estimating Mexican problems and politics.

FEW travelers, scholars, or statesmen have written on Mexico since 1885 without drawing on the bulky volumes produced by Hubert Howe Bancroft, the California historian, who worked on a mass production basis. His 39 volumes, compiled with the aid of an army of secretaries, translators and transcribers, continue to hold first place as our best English source on Mexico and adjoining territories, from ancient times to about 1880. Bancroft belonged to the "literary school" of historians and his text is replete with the rhetorical flourishes which distinguished the work of Prescott, Motley, Carlyle and others who wrote in the middle of the last century. The chief value of his work, therefore, lies in the presentation of an immense number of footnotes, references and bibliographical items which no one before or since his time has ever equaled, let alone surpassed.

With these thoughts in mind, I wish to point out the necessity for caution in using Bancroft's volumes. He was a patriotic American who believed in that ever-changing political concept known at "liberalism." His attempts to portray the religious life of Spaniards, and later, Mexicans, are often beclouded by the use of such terms as "fanaticism," "bigotry" and "narrow-mindedness." So it is that while I, along with all those interested in Mexican history, admit the debt we owe Bancroft for his labors, at the same time contend that his conclusions and judgments must be accepted with caution and subjected to the more rigid requirements as to truth and prejudice which obtain in the scholarly world today.

THE only one-volume history of Mexico in English regarded as worthwhile today is Herbert Ingram Priestley's "The Mexican Nation." As this is, for the most part, a condensation of Bancroft's five volumes on Mexican history proper, it is subject to many of the criticisms which apply to the older work. Prof. Priestley evidently produced his book to fill a long-felt need and he has never asserted, so far as I know, that the solution to all contentious matters will be found within its pages. The mere fact that the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in Mexico are disposed of in a chapter apiece, show the need for a great deal of research into Mexican archives and materials.

Ernest Gruening's "Mexico and Its Heritage" has been hailed as the book which answered President Wilson's remark that a complete study of Mexican problems had never been made. With all due respect to Mr. Gruening, I do not think that such a book has been written yet. Although he traveled, although he consulted many sources, although he turned out a creditable piece of work, the author failed very much in the way that Bancroft failed—he did not quite grasp the Spanish-Indian psychology or the Catholic philosophy of life. And the lack of specialized monographs and studies on a wide variety of questions (from 1519 to 1935) leaves gaps in "Mexico and Its Heritage," which only time and continuous research will fill.

Few Americans have written more about Mexico than Carleton Beals. His "Mexico: An Interpretation," "Mexican Maze," "Porfirio Diaz" and other books show him to be a writer of power, one who has traveled and lived with all sorts and conditions of Mexicans. And yet, he can not restrain his flair for the spectacular nor can he reconcile himself to the belief that Christianity is a better form of worship than the homage paid to stone gods similar to those now housed in Mexico's Museo Nacional. If we approach any aspect of Mexican history without the proper conception of Christianity as it appeared to the Spaniards, our interpretations of that history will be grossly distorted. Beals is colorful, gossipy, often completely accurate; but few students will use his works consistently in their footnotes.

DR. WILFRID HARDY CALLCOTT has attempted two books on Mexico since 1822, these being "Church and State in Mexico, 1822-1857" and "Liberalism in Mexico, 1857-1929." The amount of time and labor expended on these two volumes should not be underestimated by any serious-minded person; Dr. Callcott worked over a field that has witnessed Mexico's most turbulent period since the conquest. It is not fair to be too critical of those who, to quote a local professor, "make the first wide sweeps in a new field and thus make it easier for others to follow in their wake." At the same time, observations on obvious defects should not be taken unkindly when they are advanced in a friendly spirit.

Dr. Callcott tried to estimate the forces rampant in Mexico since 1822 and he succeeded to the extent that students of the period now have a very definite outline on which to base further study. My chief criticism concerns itself with the handling of the church problem; it is hardly conceivable that the so-called "Clericals" were always the oppressors of the poor and downtrodden while the so-called "Liberals" were always the defenders of liberty, progress and good government. Perhaps the more generous use of documents from church archives might have given a different tinge to Dr. Callcott's studies.

There is no doubt that other scholarly work has been done which will be found in the thousands of other bibliographies of Mexican history, but little of it has been used so widely as the work done by the men under consideration. And to this paragraph I might add, what is to me almost a truism: "Scratch a book on Mexico and you find—Bancroft."

• • • •

It may appear that my criticism is almost wholly destructive. Therefore, I shall add a few words designed to be constructive. I think that few students of Mexican affairs will deny my assertion that American scholars have done comparatively little research into the nineteenth and twentieth century of our neighboring republic.

Dr. Bolton's distinguished seminar at the University of California has labored long and mightily to produce high-class studies of sixteenth century Mexico—usually to the greater glory and credit of Spain and Spanish institutions. I feel that the same kind of scholarly application to Mexico's history in the last 125 years will show a picture vastly different from that which so far has been presented to us.

We need critical biographies of independence leaders; of Santa Anna and others of his era; of Diaz and Madero, Huerta and Carranza, Obregon and Calles. We lack definitive studies of the first and second empires; of the reform laws and their operations; of the proper place in Mexican history which should be assigned to the exploitation by foreign companies of oil, mines, agriculture, waterpower and other resources.

Until such time as this work is done, I contend that every reader, be he teacher, student or the ordinary man in the street, should accept present opinions on Mexico which are based on the above and similar sources, as indicative only of a broad, general "drift"—and not as statements of fact which neither time nor additional study can improve.

Loudoun Planning Merger of Schools

Closing of Five, Transfer of Pupils Considered.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Further consolidation of the schools in Loudoun County in order to meet the economic situation is being considered by school officials. An effort will be made to cut expenses and in a schedule which will be presented to the board at its next meeting thec losing of five schools will be considered, the pupils from these to be conveyed to other units.

The tentative program includes closing the Waterford high school department and bringing students enrolled in it to Leesburg; closing Milltown and transfer pupils to Waterford; closing Little River and transporting pupils to Aldie; closing Coleman and conveying pupils to Sterling, and closing Woodburn and transferring pupils to Hamilton.

It is expected that vigorous opposition would develop to the school consolidation program as outlined, but school board members are said to have reached the conclusion that additional consolidations are imperative.

Carlisle Bargeron

Collusion!

FOR sheer perseverance, attention to duty, devotion to the public weal or something, we should like to commend the members of the Nye committee. Day after day they plod on with their munitions hearing, digging up one "sensation" after another and then when one looks for it in the papers he finds it buried on page 12. It is not that the papers are in the employ of the munitions makers, it is simply that compared with the run of news these days the Nye committee can't make the front pages.

BARGERON.

Some time ago it brought about the elimination of the profits of war, or at least, everybody said, yes, the profits ought to be eliminated and we will go into the next war with that in mind, but since then the committee seems not to have done so well in a publicity way.

• • • •

For several weeks now the committee has been on the American shipbuilding phase of war. If the committee was getting any publicity this might be worth while as revealing what goes on here in Washington. It wouldn't be what the committee is trying to bring out, however.

A few days ago the committee gleefully proclaimed it had established a definite case of collusion between the Navy and the big shipbuilders. That's a severe word, collusion is. It implies deceit and fraud.

What the committee has come upon, tardily if it really constituted a surprise, is what we have known around here all along.

And that is, there is not the slightest question in the world that the Navy in parceling out its huge PWA funds spreads the money around without regard to sealed bids. The bids are made perfunctorily. The boys, however, get together and split up the work among them in a great, give-and-take division of the gravy. It's more gravy than the Navy has ever had to pass out before, too.

• • • •

But this is not collusion. It's the only thing to do under the NRA codes which make competitive bidding ridiculous. Why, down at the Navy they have been laughing for months about how they had to put the bids in a hat and draw them out by the blindfold method. They don't really do this, of course. The point is that competitive bidding under the NRA is the bunk.

On one occasion, in fact, when the steelmakers all submitted identical bids nobody in the Administration expressed horror. Least of all, did Mr. Roosevelt. He did object to the particular prices agreed upon by the steel boys and called them to the White House and struck a compromise between what he wanted to pay and what they asked. At the time this was held up by the Administration not as collusion, but as an example of Mr. Roosevelt's persuasiveness.

• • • •

If the committee could make itself heard the public might be interested in these facts. But inasmuch as it can't there is a question of whether it would not be better for it to get down to the brass tacks in its big shipbuilding quiz.

They are not a matter, admittedly, of grave national import. But when we accept the situation whereby the Navy funds are just spread around among the boys as we have been doing, they are all that is left of the inquiry.

They have to do with the question of why Lawrence Wilder, former head of the New York Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., and now with a small shipbuilding company of his own, is left out in the cold.

He is the one, of course, who stirred up the inquiry. He has been frozen out and can't get in. It is not a matter to arouse the citizenry, but the question of why he can't get in on the bonanza is about all there is for the committee to find out.

The Administration explanation is that his is not an established plant and he wants Navy awards to make it so. But the explanation of spending all the money was that it gave employment in the shipyards. The labor representatives of the shipyard workers want Wilder to have some, holding that a new plant will give still more employment. And Wilder admittedly can build ships. It seems that all the boys should be let in. The money is being poured down a rat-hole anyway.

Leonard Outhwaite Tells The Story Of "Unrolling The Map" Of World-Wide Exploration.

By Theodore Hall.

ON page 2 of Leonard Outhwaite's "Unrolling the Map" (John Day, $3.75) is a map of the world as it was known in history in 3000 B. C. In the method used in this book, the unknown areas are printed in black, with faint white lines to identify the continents. The known areas are in white. And this map, Mercator's projection, looks like a large blank blackboard, with one little white puff in the center as if it had been slapped with a chalk eraser. There, in Egypt, Syria and the Euphrates Valley, lay the whole known world in the midst of Cimmerian darkness.

Turn to page 325 and see the world as we know it. It has turned white with the light of our knowledge. You will have to pore over it to identify the few scattered black spots of remaining mystery—Arctic islands, portions of the Amazon Basin, bits of central Abyssinia, Arabia, Tibet, Borneo and New Guinea.

The men and the expeditions responsible for that change in 5,000 years make up the story of this absorbing book. From Hannu, the Egyptian, in 2750 B. C., to Piccard in his stratosphere balloon last year, Mr. Outhwaite recounts the efforts of man to spread in two dimensions over the earth, in three dimensions above and below sea level. It is a wide-flung tale which will warm the cockles of any wanderlusting heart.

THE 56 maps, with white areas spreading into the black before your eyes, put the theme explicitly. But the really admirable point of Mr. Outhwaite's work is that the bulk of exploring narratives he had to condense did not push him into a dry summarization. Out of his brief but vivid chapters we see the men themselves rising into view—we share in their perils and hardihood, we advance with them over desert and jungle and ice field. He has given us the materials of an encyclopedia, but his book reads like the thrilling adventure story it is.

All of us know something of Marco Polo and Magellan, of Henry Hudson, David Livingstone and Admiral Peary. But never before have they and a hundred other great explorers had their feats narrated in a single book. Here we can compare the first recorded explorer, Hannu (who pushed up the Nile and down the Red Sea to the "Land of Punt"—Abyssinia) with Samuel Baker (who worked in much the same territory), Hannu, the Carthaginian, sailed down the west coast of Africa almost to the Equator in 500 B. C. A thousand years later we watch Bartholomeo Diaz, the Portuguese, start out on the same track and double the Cape of Good Hope.

It is astonishing how early were some explorations made. Pytheas, the Greek, unbelieved for centuries, circumnavigated the British Isles in 310 B. C. and brought back word of the country called Thule (Iceland? Norway?) which, with the epithet "Ultima," became a term for the last outpost of the world. Another Greek, Diogenes (not our old friend, the lantern-bearing cynic), very probably got into East Arica, saw Lake Victoria and Mount Kilmanjaro, and guessed the source of the Nile—all this in the first century A. D., 1,700 years before the problem of the Nile was solved. The Romans had reached Indo-China by 100 A. D. And Marco Polo's father and uncle, whom we're likely to think pioneers on the transasiatic route to China, had predecessors a century earlier in the persons of the little known Friar John and Friar William. Assigning priority is all but impossible in exploraton.

TAKE an instance which Mr. Outhwaite gleans from out-of-the-way works of scholarship. In 1898 a Swedish laborer found a stone entangled in an aspen root in a wood lot at Kensington, Minn. There was a strange inscription on it. The first professor who saw it declared the carving a clumsy fake. But nine years later a scholar named Holand chanced upon it and became kindled with enthusiasm. He translated the inscription: "Eight Goths (Swedes) and 22 Norwegians . . . exploration journey from Vinland . . . year 1362." Experts said the aspen was at least 70 years old when it entwined the stone. (Who, in that region in 1830, would have had the knowledge or interest to create a forgery?) And history records that in 1355 the king of the Norsemen sent an expedition to rescue a colony in Greenland; that it missed the way, got into Hudson Bay, up the Nelson River, and into the forests of Canada. The authenticity of the stone is not yet proved to everyone's satisfaction. But the likelihood seems to be that the Vikings got into Minnesota a century before Columbus found Watlings Island.

There are other sidelights which Mr. Outhwaite brings forward. The first man around the world was not a Spaniard returning to Seville on Magellan's ship, but an East Indian, named "Malacca Henry," who had come to Spain from Malacca, gone westward around the globe with Magellan, and reached his home territory in the East Indies a year before the Spaniards completed the circumnavigation. "El Dorado," which to centuries of Spanish-American explorers meant a mythical region of wealth, began with its literal translation, "The Gilded Man"—from the fable that an Indian king decorated himself every day with a dusting of gold powder. Mr. Outhwaite corrects the general impression that Col. Younghusband, in 1904, was the first to enter Tibet, by listing two dozen explorers who got into that forbidden land long before. Even the first, Friar Oderic, in 1330, reached Lhasa.

Mr. Outhwaite takes up explorers age by age and continent by continent in orderly, craftsmanlike fashion. Great names and obscure, all helped to unroll the map of the world. Watching it unfurl in these pages is a stirring experience for both and old and young armchair travelers.

Wm. Lyon Phelps

A LETTER has come from Miss Mildred Lowitz, of Newark, N. J., asking for a list of the books "which should be in the possession of every cultivated person."

Suppose today we confine this list only to British literature. On another day we can take up the literature of other countries.

• • • •

Shakespeare is essential. The best edition is the Yale Shakespeare, in 40 volumes. For those of moderate means, the new one-volume Shakespeare, published by Oxford Press, New York, is good. All his writings are included in one handy volume. The Authorized Version of the English Bible. Milton's Poems. The poems of Byron, Burns, Shelley, Keats, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Tennyson, Browning—these are all published conveniently and cheaply in Everyman's Library, in the Modern Library, in the Modern Student's Library, in the Oxford Classics, and in many other editions. It is best to have these authors complete.

• • • •

The following novels are essential: Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," DeFoe's "Robinson Crusoe," Richardson's "Clarissa," Fielding's "Tom Jones," Scott's "Quentin Durward," Jane Austin's "Pride and Prejudice," Dicken's "David Copperfield," Thackeray's "Henry Esmond," Blackmore's "Lorna Doone," Emily Bronte's "Wuthering Heights," George Eliot's "The Mill on the Floss," Hardy's "The Return of the Native," "Meredith's "The Ordeal of Richard Feverel," Carrol's "Alice in Wonderland," Reade's "The Cloister and the Hearth," Stevenson's "Treasure Island." All of these, I believe, are in Everyman's Library and other cheap editions.

In general literature: Bacon's "Essays," Browne's "Religio Medici," Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," Walton's "The Complete Angler," Boswell's "Life of Johnson," Carlyle's "Heroes and Hero Worship."

This will do for a start. I have omitted all living authors, and all drama except those of Shakespeare.

Plans Announced For Spelling Bee

Outsiders Barred From Winchester Event.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Plans for the annual Winchester and Frederick County spelling bee March 15, in the auditorium of Handley High School, were announced today by officials of the Lions Club, sponsor of the event.

A departure from former years is found in the ruling which bars outsiders. For the past two years, a spelling club from Washington, consisting of about a dozen members, has journeyed to Winchester for the match and each time the visitors have returned with the spoils. Last year local contestants were "spelled down" early in the match while the Washingtonians fought through phalanx after phalanx of polysyllables before the outcome was settled.

Garland C. Quarles, superintendent of the Handley schools; Leslie D. Kline, division superintendent of Frederick County schools, and W. W. Glass, an attorney, have been designated to announce the words.

Hillandale Farm Leads Herd Unit

730 Pounds of Milk Is Average Production.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Hillandale Farm, located near Round Hill, led the Loudoun County Dairy Herd Improvement Association for the month of January, according to a report just released by the association. This herd has an average production of 730 pounds of milk and 35.5 pounds of fat.

Next on the list was Ophir Farm, near Leesburg, with an average production of 699 pounds of milk and 31.6 pounds of fat.

The average production of Group No. 1 of the association was 642 pounds of milk and 27.8 pounds of fat. Eight hundreds and fifty-eight cows were tested, 106 of this number being dry. In Group No. 2 the average production was 536 pounds of milk and 24.5 pounds of fat. Eight hundred and twenty-two cows were tested, 112 of which were dry.

Court Gold Verdicts Raise New Dilemmas

Justice Stone Avoids Them By Franky Conceding Government's Powers.

By Elliott Thurston.

HAS the Supreme Court set up a moral bar to drastic inflation? If holders of Government gold bonds can show loss can they recover damages? Does this apply to foreign holders of Government gold bonds?

In the aftermath of the court's decisions on the gold cases these questions are differently answered according to different constructions placed upon the words of Chief Justice Hughes' decision in the Perry case, relating to a Liberty bond.

One view is that the court has said, in effect: If you own a Liberty bond, if you can prove in the Court of Claims that the dollars offered you in payment of that bond will buy less than the dollars you originally loaned, then you are entitled to recover the difference. Leaving aside the difficulties of ascertaining what that difference would be, of finding some measure of value—such as the commodity price index, for example—with which to compute the difference, if this is what the court meant, then in case of drastic inflation a right to recovery would exist. The greater the inflation, and hence the greater the loss of buying power, the greater would be the sum recoverable.

This would be merely a moral curb on inflation, however, because in practice the Government, by withdrawing the right to sue before the Court of Claims, could prevent the filing of suits to recover damages.

ANOTHER view, to which the Attorney General evidently adheres, is that the court has said in effect: You are not entitled to collect more than you would have received had you been paid in gold.

The court specifically held, as it has before, that the right to hold or use gold, stamped as money by the sovereign, is much circumscribed. Thus, the court upholds the power of the Government to regulate and restrict export of gold, for instance, though it does not necessarily follow or appear from the decision that the court would uphold the power to seize and impound all gold.

In any case, according to this view, a bondholder is only entitled to receive as many dollars as he would have been able to get with the gold promised him if that gold were actually turned over to him. Thus, as the Attorney General argued in the Perry case, had Perry been paid gold he could have obtained but $20.67 an ounce for it—not the present $35 an ounce price or some other price subsequently fixed for gold by the Government.

By this reasoning, Perry or any other bondholder would be obliged to accept whatever dollars were offered to him, whether depreciated or not, whether their buying power was infinitely less than that of the dollars he originally loaned to the Government. By this logic, there would not even be a moral edict by the court against inflation.

• • • •

AT one point in the Perry decision, the Chief Justice said: "Plaintiff demands the 'equivalent' in currency of the gold coin promised. But 'equivalent' can not mean more than the amount of money which the promised gold coin would be worth to the bondholder for the purposes for which it could legally be used."

For what purposes could gold legally be used today? Under the Government's action, gold would have to be turned in at $20.67 an ounce. But does this mean that no consideration would be given to the worth of the dollars?

"That equivalent or worth," said the Chief Justice in the very next paragraph, "could not properly be ascertained save in the light of the domestic and restricted market which the Congress had lawfully established. In the domestic transactions to which the plaintiff was limited, in the absence of special license, determination of the value of the gold coin would necessarily have regard to its use as legal tender and as a medium of exchange under a single monetary system with an established parity of all coins and currency. And in view of the control of export and foreign exchange, and the restricted domestic use, the question of value, in relation to transactions legally available to the plaintiff, would require a consideration of the purchasing power of the dollar which the plaintiff has received. Plaintiff has not shown, or attempted to show, that in relation to buying power he has sustained any loss whatever."

Why this reference to buying power unless the court meant that if loss of buying power can be shown the bondholder is entitled to recover? The inference seems plain—that the court's view is that the Government can not satisfy its gold debts by offering dollars so inflated as to be worth less in buying power than dollars originally loaned. The Government could, of course, bar the way to recovery of damages by denying access to the Court of Claims. On the other hand there would be the difficulty of measuring the loss in buying power and hence measuring damages.

JUSTICE STONE escaped these dilemmas—and another one—by concluding in effect that since the Government could override its gold clauses, in fact, by its undisputed immunity from suit, the court might as well recognize the reality. It evidently seemed inconsistent to him for the court to attempt to give a certain substance to gold clauses which the Government undeniably can dissipate if it so desires. Moreover, he saw another dilemma in that attitude—the possibility that if the Government wished now to enter into an international agreement for stabilization of the dollar and lifting of domestic and exchange restrictions it would be faced with the possible necessity, under the Chief Justice's theory, of indemnifying holders of Government gold bonds. That is, if exchange restrictions were thus lifted, and the bondholder could get legally for his gold more than the dollars now being offered him, he would have a right to recovery under the reasoning of the Chief Justice. And would not that tend to hamper stabilization?

While these all too intricate matters were widely debated in the wake of the decisions, the consensus was that, practically, whatever the court's moral but entirely unenforceable edict against inflation, holders of gold bonds, whether Americans or foreigners, would never be able to recover anything more than face value in dollars, regardless of how much those dollars might be inflated or how little they might buy.

(Sally Rand recently addressed a gathering of business men and said she regarded fan and bubble dancing strictly as a matter of merchandising.—Ed.)

When in those soft lights I disport
In manner that is quite revealing
I give no thought to lofty art—
With me it's just a business feeling;
Behold me as I do my stuff,
But let this point be plain and clear, sir:
I am no slave of Terpsichore—
I'm just a business pioneer, sir!

II.

When all apparel I discard
And substitute a fan or bubbles,
Mine is no yen to be risqu —
I'm just avoiding business troubles;
Though I may dance in nature's garb,
Reflecting care-free animation,
I'm simply operating as
A sound and going corporation.

III.

You watch me do my bubble dance
With movements not so very Grecian
And never sense I think of things
Like assets, taxes and depletion;
I dance to thoughts of overhead
Demanding careful analyzing,
And all the bookkeeping that goes
With all successful merchandising.

IV.

To you I seem to twist and squirm
And revel in those svelte gyrations,
Yet as I move I'm thinking of
The item "cash from operations;"
To startle and to shock the crowds
Is not among my major yearnings—
With Sally it's a matter of
My "cash reserves" and "current earnings."

V.

Ah, judge me right, my public, dear!
You see in me no half-baked Helen;
I operate like Henry Ford
Or Rockefeller, Andrew Mellon.
With but a bubble to my back
I may present a different story,
But what you see, I wish to state,
Is not my total inventory.

Famed Paintings to Find Home in New Capital Gallery

"Adoration of the Magi," by Sandro Botticelli.

"Madonna of House of Alba," by Raphael, above

These world masterpieces—work of Botticelli, Raphael, Van Eyck, Perugino, and Titian—will be housed in a "great temple of art" in Washington, according to plans announced by Andrew Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury.

Already Mr. Mellon has invested $19,000,000 in works of art which he plans to place in a national art gallery, such as the paintings shown on this page.

Botticelli's "Adoration of the Magi," valued at $838,350, was painted in Rome in 1481 while the artist was at work on frescoes in the Sistine Chapel. It is considered his greatest work.

Raphael's "Madonna of the House of Alba," worth $1,166,400, was painted in Rome in 1510 and hung over an altar in a Naples convent until bought by a viceroy of Spain. It was then owned by the Duke of Alba, a London banker, the Hermitage Gallery in old St. Petersburg, and Mr. Mellon.

Van Eyck's "Annunciation," worth $503,010, is supposed to have been completed in 1434, the artist being known as the "inventor of oil painting." It was variously owned until the Hermitage Gallery got it and then went to Mr. Mellon.

"Venus With the Mirror," costing $544,320, is one of the famous works of Titian, and was painted about 1565. It is supposed to represent the artist's daughter.

Perugino's "Crucifixion," valued at $195,615, was presented in 1496 to a church of the Dominicans in San Gemignano and hung over an altar there until the French invasion under Napoleon. It was then sold to various people until the Hermitage Gallery sold it to Mr. Mellon.

Port o' Gloves Operated Here To Aid Women

Tints for Toe Nails, Another New Wrinkle for D. C. Fashion Setters.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IN ONE'S IMAGINATION there's a "land of lost things," where every little odd and end that you lose is magically gathered together. There are mountains of pins snow-capped with millions of handkerchiefs towering above fields of pennies and hillocks of eyeglasses. Even an amateur geologist can tell that vast stretches of gravel are nothing more than a mixture of compacts, lipsticks, pencils and buttons.

In reality there's a "port of missing gloves" and it's located right in the heart of town. Here every week come bushels of gloves which are picked up in the theaters. Sometimes a kindly soul will find a stranded glove on the sidewalk and leave it here with all the other thousands which are waiting to be claimed. If you've lost a glove and can identify it, why don't you stop by and take a chance on finding it here?

Not only is this a port of missing gloves, it's a glove repair shop. If the tips of the fingers have come unstitched and gape open like a goldfish's mouth you can have them remedied in a short time at small cost. Or if the palms are splitting or the buttons missing, these casualties may promptly be attended to.

They make a specialty here of cleaning gloves. There are numbers of customers who come in regularly with their "glove laundry" for the excellent process which is used to remove soils and stains.

Tints for Toe Nails.

You may start being chic at the tip of your toes if you use the toe nail tint that's prompting so many moderns to make pedicures a habit.

"It's perfectly outrageous!" exclaimed a buxom dowager who lifted her lorgnette to survey the perfectly pedicured plaster model displayed on the counter. And of course it's outrageous! That's the fun of it! Just the idea of having ten mandarin red-tipped toes is positively irresistible!

It's natural to wonder just why one should use a special toe nail polish rather than the one you use on your finger nails. The representative of the company who manufactures these "outrageous" polishes has a logical answer. The toe nails are a heavier texture, he says, and therefore they need a heavier and more durable coating.

New Blouses Urged.

Now that even the weather pessimists are granting that spring will soon burst in on us, hundreds of shoppers are taking out their last year's coat suits and planning to perk them up with a new blouse.

These blouse seekers find their haven in a certain local store, where peasant blouses, white with colored smocking, are given a gala display.

There is something about this type of blouse that endears it to everyone. One fashion expert has said, "They're adaptable to every type. They make you look picturesque, interesting and supremely feminine."

Beware Wrong Powder.

Most women are so absorbed with the problem of keeping their skin clear, smooth and soft that they neglect to attend to the color. And yet one of the surest means of making your complexion your best feature is to bring out its natural, delicate shade. If it has an ivory cast, how wrong to submerge it under a pinkish powder. And yet, if it has pink undertones, how equally silly to use an ivory powder. Don't buy a powder because you like the color and would like to have skin that shade. Buy a powder that adapts itself to your skin and flatters it. The safest means of doing this is to buy blended powder.

One large cosmetics concern felt so strongly about their clients using the proper powder that they have just inaugurated a new service in a downtown store. You may call here and discuss your powder-vs.-complexion problems with the representative of the concern and she will blend a powder that will suit you exactly. If you want another powder for evening, and a darker one for summer she attends to these, too.

Soap for Stockings.

If your budget is one of those wild affairs that will never stay within bounds, try restraining it by taking out hose and lingerie insurance. This insurance comes in the form of a powdered soap, which, if you use according to directions, will reduce the runs and breaks in hose and lingerie about 90 per cent.

Since it costs only 25 cents, and you stand a chance of saving $25, it's rated high as an investment.

Women Wear "Spatzies."

Second or third cousin to the dapper gentlemen's spats are the "spatzies," latest creation to keep your ankles warm. These are wide lastex bands which you wear in the manner of anklets.

Baking Shells Displayed.

If you want to give your lobster imperial or your crab cakes a real seaside background you might try some of the baking shells on display in the household department of a downtown store. These are amply large for a generous helping of seafood. The cost, only 25 cents for three.

Town and Country Coat Has Air of Distinction

Pattern No. 878.

"I WANT a town-and-country coat." "I want a spring coat that I can wear over my suit on chilly days." "I want a casual coat, but it must have distinction."

Here it is. A town-and-country coat with roomy sleeves to fit over heavy frocks or suits; and it is a coat that has an air of well-bred distinction. Wear it with a scarf, or leave the front open to form revers. The pattern is accurately cut in sizes 14 to 42. Size 16 (34) requires 3¾ yards of 54-inch fabric and lining.

Doctor Warns Against Neglect Of Vitamin B, Aid to Growth

Infants and Rapidly Developing Children Need Generous Amounts, He Declares; Yeast Breads and Cereal Are Helpful.

DOCTORS and the public at large have been vitamin-minded for the last few years. Their attention has, up to now, been largely concentrated on vitamin A, the fat vitamin found in cream, butter and egg-yolk, or on vitamins C and D, the orange juice and cod liver oil vitamins that are the topic of the day among mothers of growing children.

But the latest news from the scientists is that people have been neglecting vitamin B, and that it's time B was stepping to the front for its share of attention. It seems that B is the growth, appetite-stimulating and anti-nervousness vitamin.

From Dr. Roger H. Dennett, health editor of the Woman's Home Companion, comes the latest appeal for more attention to vitamin B.

Vitamin B, he informs us, was discovered years ago, though it was not given a name. In far-away China a certain form of paralysis called beriberi was common among the people, and even poultry seemed to suffer from the same affliction. Men, women and children would virtually lose the use of their arms or legs and whole flocks of chickens would flop about the yard supporting their weight with outstretched wings, because the legs refused to work.

Paralysis Disappears.

One day a Chinese cook who worked in a medical center threw into the yard a lot of husks of rice that were always discarded when rice was polished. The chickens, which had always been fed the refined rice, partook of the rice husks plentifully and shortly their paralysis disappeared. Thus it was discovered that the dark outside coating and the germ of certain grains contain a substance that the refined and finished product lacks.

As time went on, other foods were found to contain this factor. Later this vitamin was found to be helpful to the human race in other ways, and diets that were poor in vitamin B were proved to produce a certain train of symptoms such as poor appetite and failure of the young to grow properly.

The effects of a complete deficiency of this vitamin are well known clinically, whereas a partial deficiency has produced a complex symptom consisting of loss of weight, stiffness of extremities, restlessness and fretfulness, pallor and low percentage of hemoglobin.

Cow's milk was formerly thought to contain enough vitamin B for little bottle-fed babies. Experiments with rats show that milk may fail to supply the proper quantity.

Infants Need Generous Amount.

Although the average American family does not always have a diet deficient in vitamin B, it is evident that infants and rapidly growing children have greater need of generous amounts of vitamin B than other people.

Although vitamin B influences the weight curve favorably, infants have a low capacity for storage of vitamin reserve. This means that a constant supply of foods containing vitamin B must be maintained day after day. Everyone needs ample amounts of these factors and women who plan the family dietary should know where to find them. Yeast is particularly rich in this vitamin. It has been shown that the temperature necessary for baking does not destroy at least one of the factors of vitamin B. Yeast bread then is distinctly helpful.

Next in importance in everyday foods come the germ and husks of cereal, rolled oats and whole wheat cerals and unrefined flours, all rich in vitamin B. All vegetables contain some vitamin B, and spinach seems to rank high in this regard. Egg yolk is richer in vitamin B than almost any of our other daily foods. Raisins also are a good source of this factor, as are tomatoes, both raw and canned. All fruits have fair amounts.

Trick in Soaking Pans Is Explained

Use Cold Water for Starchy, Hot for Sugary Ones.

There is a real reason for soaking one pan in hot water before washing and another one in cold water, depending upon the kind of food that has been cooked in the pan. The procedure has always been cold water for starchy pans and hot water for sugary ones, and this will explain the trick.

Sugar and starch are both classed as carbohydrates, but they react differently when in contact with water. Sugar dissolves easily in cold water and more readily in hot, while starch does not. Foods containing starch can be placed safely in plain water for cooking. Because the starch does not dissolve in water the food will hold its contour while it cooks.

Foods containing sugar, fruits are the most prominent, will break readily when cooked in plain water, because the sugar of the fruit will dissolve in the water. A sirup of sugar and water, thickened by cooking, is suggested for cooking fruit, rather than water alone. The fruit when dropped into the hot sirup will absorb some of the sugar in solution, stiffening the flesh of the fruit. This will enable the fruit to hold its shape while cooking.

The Tentative Double.

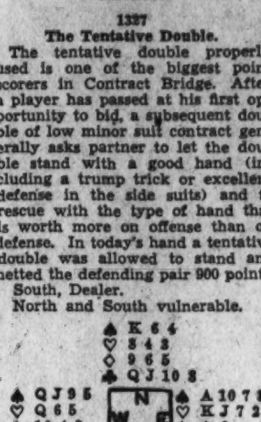
The tentative double properly used is one of the biggest point scorers in Contract Bridge. After a player has passed at his first opportunity to bid, a subsequent double of low minor suit contract generally asks partner to let the double stand with a good hand (including a trump trick or excellent defense in the side suits) and to rescue with the type of hand that is worth more on offense than on defense. In today's hand a tentative double was allowed to stand and netted the defending pair 900 points.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass (1) | Pass | Pass | 1NT |
| 2◇ (2) | Dbl. (3) | Pass | Pass (4) |
| Pass | | | |

1—South should have bid this hand immediately. The time to make minimum bids is at one's first opportunity. Later on it may be too expensive.

2—A bad bid since South can be sure of only four or five tricks. According to the Culbertson Rule of Two and Three he should be sure of six tricks when making a vulnerable overcall at the two level.

3—A tentative double.

4—East is well satisfied with the double and lets it stand.

The Play.

West opened the Queen of spades and continued the suit, declarer ruffing on the third round. The King of diamonds was taken by the Ace, and the heart return was ducked by South and won by West's Queen. A heart continuation forced out the Ace. A top trump was next laid down and a low club led. West jumped in immediately with the Ace and returned a heart, which East won with the King. The club King was taken and the last heart led through declarer.

If declarer trumped high, West's ten would become the master trump; if declarer ruffed low, West would overruff. The defense thus secured two spade tricks, two hearts, two clubs and two trumps, setting declarer three tricks for a point score of 900. The best they could have scored without South's bid was a nonvulnerable game at spades, only amounting to a little over 400 points.

Preserved Eggs Delicacy in China

Claim They Keep Indefinitely Under Their Method.

The Chinese have a method of preserving eggs that they claim will keep the egg indefinitely without cold storage. The egg, when fresh, is pickled by immersion for three months or longer in a thick infusion of lime, salt, lye and tea leaves (or the first three ingredients added to a strong infusion of tea leaves), then drained and coated with a mixture of clay and rice husks, etc. The color and general condition of the meat of these eggs vary with their age.

When moderately old—say a year—the yolk is brownish green and of a soft, almost pasty, consistence; the white is a stiff jelly of very deep, translucent amber, and both have a fishy, ammoniacal odor. The yolk has enlarged itself by absorption of water from the whites and tastes somewhat like beef extract with a suspicion of fish paste addition. The white is almost neutral in flavor. The odor decreases with exposure to the air.

These preserved eggs are considered a delicacy among the Chinese.

Hint of Spring Spurs Change In Heavy Menu

Jellied Consomme Among Dishes Suggested as Winter's End Nears.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IT'S REMARKABLE how a few days of sunshine and moderate weather affect the ever-changing appetite. Just the first hint of spring makes us forget thick, winter soups, steamed puddings and many other dishes so welcome a week or two ago. Already jaded appetites are demanding fat, red strawberries to replace the sliced bananas or canned peaches that have been the winter accompaniments to dry cereals. Families are looking to the housewife, for she is expected to put a breath of freshness into her menus.

Try a jellied consomme for a change and serve it with hot, buttered crackers fresh from the oven. Your family will enjoy this change of first course.

The following ingredients will make one quart of stock.

Consomme.

1 pound lean beef
1 pound lean veal
1¼ quarts cold water or
1 pint cold water and
1 pint chicken stock
2 pepper corns
1 clove
½ teaspoon sweet herbs
Sprig parsley
1 tablespoon each celery, carrot, onion
1 teaspoon salt

Cut the meat in small pieces. Brown from one-fourth to one-half of the meat. This gives added color and improves the flavor. Soak the meat in cold water for 30 minutes. This helps to extract the juices from the meat. Heat gradually to the simmering point (190-210 degrees F.). Skim at once. Continue to simmer for three or four hours to insure as complete extraction of juices and flavor of meat as possible. If the mixture boils it is not so fine in flavor.

Add the spices, herbs and vegetables, and continue simmering for an hour or hour and a half. The seasonings are added at this time rather than earlier to prevent the disagreeable flavor of overcooked vegetables. Strain the soup into a large bowl or other container. The stock should be strained through several layers of cheesecloth placed over the strainer.

The stock should be cooled quickly, as this improves the keeping qualities of the broth. If there is any fat to be removed it may be easily skimmed from the surface of the chilled stock. After the stock is skimmed and chilled it should be kept in the refrigerator until needed.

The stock may be jellied in the following manner: Soften two tablespoons of plain gelatin in one-half cup of cold water. Add this to one quart of boiling hot stock and stir until gelatin is dissolved. The trays of a mechanical refrigerator are excellent for chilling the jellied broth. When the broth is cold and firm, serve it in individual cups garnished with a sprig of parsley and a wedge of lemon.

Suggested Dinner Menu.

Jellied Consomme
With Lemon Slices
Hot Buttered Crackers
Fried Calve's Liver and Bacon
Baked Potatoes Escalloped Tomatoes
Romaine and Orange Salad
With French Dressing
Bread and Butter
Chocolate Topped Cup Cakes
Tea (Milk for Children)

Escalloped Tomatoes.

1 quart canned tomatoes
Salt and pepper
Bread crumbs
Butter or other fat
Grated cheese, if desired

Drain juice from canned tomatoes. Place a layer of tomato in a greased baking dish, add a seasoning of salt and pepper, then a thin layer of bread crumbs. Cut the fat into tiny pieces and lay on the crumbs. Then add another layer of tomato and proceed until the materials are used, having crumbs for the top layer. Add bits of fat and bake for 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350-400 degrees F.). Serve in the baking dish. If cheese is used, it may be added to each layer, or to the top one only.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cuttler.

Treatment of Diabetes.
Part I.

DIABETES is a very old disease and throughout the years has handicapped hundreds of thousands of persons.

The pancreas is a gland that produces two secretions. It has been known for centuries that one of these is a secretion rich in digestive ferments that is poured into the intestine. Only recently has the true nature of the second secretion been described. This is the one that governs the use of sugar in the body. Sir Frederick G. Banting, of the University of Toronto, assisted by a young medical student, Charles A. Best, succeeded in preparing an extract of this secretion. They named it insulin.

Insulin does not reach the intestine. It is formed by certain cells of the pancreas and enters the blood directly, and hence is known as an endocrine product (endocrine secretions pass directly into the blood or lymph).

This imported endocrine produced by the pancreas is prepared from fresh beef glands, is carefully purified and standardized, and is now used when the pancreas fails to secrete this vital substance. The standardization has been so exact that it is now known that one unit of insulin can govern the burning or digestion (metabolism) of from one to two grams of carbohydrates (starches and sugars).

The management of a case of diabetes requires complete cooperation between patient and physician. An attempt is made to adjust the carbohydrates in the diet so that the patient will be sufficiently nourished and at the same time sugar will not appear in the urine nor be unduly high in the blood. By means of insulin this can be done.

Insulin must be administered by means of a hypodermic needle. When injected under the skin it is absorbed by the circulation. If taken by mouth it would be destroyed in the digestive tract and would have no effect whatever. Patients easily learn how to use a hypodermic syringe, how to sterilize it, together with the needle, and how much insulin to use in relation to the diet. The most accurate method of determining the condition of the patient is to check the amount of sugar in the blood and diabetics are taught how to withdraw a few drops of blood from a finger, collect them in a proper container and send the specimen to a laboratory.

If the pancreas can not produce a sufficient amount of insulin the individual undergoes starvation; that is, he is not able to utilize an important part of his food—namely, carbohydrates. Introducing insulin hypodermically provides the necessary substance so that carbohydrates can be utilized (burned) by the body.

The discussion of diabetes will be concluded tomorrow.

SHADOWS in PARADISE

By INEZ WALLACE

Helen Burns meets with nothing but discouragement when she first tries to break into the movies in Hollywood. But shortly after her marriage to Jim Nelson, cameraman, she achieves overnight success. Jim, too, has a stroke of luck and is made a director. He buys Helen a magnificent home. They work for different companies, but chance to go on location just 5 miles apart. Helen and her maid, Florette, have quarters in an isolated log cabin. One night, in a thunderstorm, Angelo Rocci, an actor in Jim's company who has roused Jim's jealousy, forces his way into the cabin.

FLORETTE and I turned in early, but we were wakened about 11 o'clock by a terrific thunderstorm. The rain came down in torrents, a perfect deluge. And the lightning flashed through the forest, giving a weird, unreal effect to the mountains. Suddenly, above the roar of the thunder, I heard someone pounding on the door and the next thing Florette, who slept in the outer room, cried out:

"You can't come een here! Madam, she ees in bed."

Then a scuffle and a scream. I groped around on the floor for my mules and, throwing a negligee over my pajamas, threw back the curtain between the two rooms. In the middle of the other room, water dripping from his great coat and a flashlight in his hand, stood Angelo Rocci.

"Light the lamp, Florette, and shut that door," I said. "If you don't, the wind'll blow your matches out as fast as you light 'em."

Angelo slammed the door, while Florette fussed with the lamp wick and finally got it to burn.

"You can't come in here like this, Angelo, and you know it. Put that coat on and march right out of here."

"Nothin' doin', sister. I'm staying—till this storm lets up, anyhow. It's all right, baby—your hubby knows I went into Lebec to get a phone call through. Even if they miss me, it's the logical thing for me to stop here, isn't it? Besides, my car's up to the hubs, skidded off that road. Nope, I'm here for the night."

"You are not!" I screamed. "You can't stay. I won't let you—storm or no storm!"

Her Plea Ignored.

"So that's it, eh? The soul of hospitality! It was O. K. for me to give you shelter in my car from the rain not long ago, but when it comes to returning a favor, you're not there. That's like a woman—you can take it, but you can't hand it out. Well, sorry to disappoint you—but I'm staying right here, and the sooner you calm down the better. There's nothing for you to worry over. We're actors—and on location. We got to be clubby. Nobody thinks anything of a thing like this nowadays."

"Angelo. You don't understand. Jim'll be furious. He's already warned me to keep away from you. It'll look as though you did this on purpose. It may even wreck my home—and I've had an awfully hard time getting a home. I'm just married and I'm happy. Please go."

"I told you, I'm staying. I'll be in camp tomorrow morning before they're up and they'll never know a thing about it. Where do I sleep?"

"There's no place for you. Florette sleeps on the cot there."

"Well, why can't she bunk with you and let me have the cot?"

"You come in with me, Florette," I said stiffly. I was so nervous my teeth were chattering, but I bundled her into my room and drew the flimsy red cotton curtain.

In a moment Angelo called out, "Hey, have you got an extra blanket? I'm freezing. You can't let me catch cold, you know. It'll ruin your husband's picture."

On a nail in a corner was a man's old bathrobe—probably left by some hunters. It was ragged and mildewed, but I handed it out to him and lay down beside Florette to wait for morning.

Neither of us slept and, with the first streaks of light, I had Florette call Angelo and tell him to leave the cabin. I heard him arguing with her in the other room, saying he wouldn't go until she made him some coffee on the oil stove.

Knowing he would be missed and anxious that he should at least tell Jim the truth, I hurried out in a few minutes to warn him about that very thing.

Florette was, by this time, pouring steaming coffee into two cups, but I shook my head. I didn't want any.

Unexpected Arrival.

"Madame looks pale. She will photograph poorly," Florette said. "Better drink the coffee."

Neither of us heard the car come up. Angelo, still in the bathrobe, with his hair tousled from sleep, sat at the table drinking coffee. I stood by the stove, with the cup and saucer in my hand, when the door flew open and Jim walked into the room. He took in the scene at a glance and turned to me.

"Congratulations," he said shortly, before I could speak. Then to Angelo, "When they told me you hadn't come back to camp, I was afraid I'd find you here. Well, I might as well know it now as later."

"Jim," I explained, trying to take his arm. "Listen to me. You've got to listen. Florette will tell you that we tried to get this man to leave. His car broke down——"

"They always do."

I turned to Angelo. "For heaven's sake, Angelo, tell him!"

"I'd love to," Angelo replied, with studied indifference, "if he'll just give me a chance. But he's evidently made up his mind to believe the worst. Perhaps another time——"

"There won't be another time," Jim said shortly. "I'll say all I have to say right now."

"Jim, you must believe me."

"I'd like to but I can't. There's nothing to say. This situation speaks for itself. And when I think of how I did believe in you. Oh, well, it's just like I said that day in front of the restaurant—girls like you're supposed to be, don't exist."

He turned to Angelo. "Don't worry, Rocci! My desire to kill you is quite overshadowed by my good judgment. You're not worth wrecking my career. Instead, I intend that you shall help build it. You're in too many shots now to drop you without scrapping the entire picture, so you'll just keep on till we finish. But it's your last picture with me. I'll never engage you for another."

"You didn't engage me for this," Angelo replied, insolently.

But Jim just looked at him a minute. Finally, "Get back to camp and into your make-up."

Both Men Left.

Then, suddenly, they were both gone, and I was left with a hysterical French maid and a cup of black coffee in my hand.

It seemed an eternity before I heard the company talking outside and, even then, it all sounded like something foreign to my life. The assistant director giving quick orders, cameramen getting set up—all the preliminaries which preceded a day's shooting on location. I'd have to pull myself together—it wouldn't do for them to see me like this, and I was scared to death to put on my make-up before I had talked to Lawson. I knew I'd cry, and the mascara would ruin the whole thing and I'd have to do it over.

"Go out and ask Mr. Lawson to come in here," I told Florette. "And don't talk to anyone. Mind, now, I said anyone."

He came in, cheerily, as usual. "Good morning—good morning!" Then, catching sight of my face, "Why, Helen, what's happened? Is anything wrong? Tell me."

I told him, omitting nothing. All the while I talked he kept shaking his head. When I had finished, he said:

"I was afraid of something like this—but not with you. I wish we'd never loaned Rocci to that other outfit. The sooner we can get through his contract and ditch him, the better. He's bad medicine."

"Never mind about the contract," I said. "What about me? What am I to do?"

"There's nothing I can think of for you to do, Helen. You'll just have to go on and trust to luck. Naturally, Jim's peeved now. I can see how it all looked to him—and candidly, I can't blame him much. But give him time to cool down. When he gets back home and has time to think it over, I believe he'll realize he's been hasty. Climb into your costume and make-up now, and let's get started."

"But I can't work with my mind in this condition. I'll ruin your picture."

"You'll ruin it if you don't work. The play must go on, my girl, no matter how the actors feel as individuals. That's the first rule of the show business. Pull yourself together now, and the others needn't know that anything has happened."

After two agonizing days of work, we finished with the outdoor stuff and packed up to return to town. As the varicolored roofs of Hollywood appeared in the distance, I turned to Lawson and asked:

"Where'll I go when we get in? What am I supposed to do now?"

"Don't act childish," he replied. "You'll go home, of course. Where else could you go? Probably Jim'll be there waiting for you. You may have a good row—but that'll probably be the end of it. And, remember now, when he makes overtures on the reconciliation stuff, don't make him come all the way. You've a brilliant career ahead of you and you can't afford a scandal. Another thing I didn't tell you before—this case wouldn't look too good before a jury."

I was horrified. "But I've told you," I exclaimed. "And there's Florette. She was with me the whole time. Doesn't her testimony count for anything?"

House Seemed Strange.

"Unfortunately, a maid's testimony is always discounted about 75 per cent. Especially a maid employed by a film star or a rich woman. Folks just naturally think she is being paid. Well, here we are. Good luck, my dear—I'll phone you."

There was the silence of the grave over the house as Florette inserted the key and opened the front door. Then, from the servants' quarters, came a housekeeper and butler—all new, all strange to me.

"Has Mr. Nelson been home?" I managed to ask.

"Yes, ma'm. He was here yesterday morning and packed up and left again on another trip."

French Women Expect to Vote Within a Year

Suffragists Are Cheered by the Prediction of Cabinet Member.

WHILE a back-to-the-home movement may be sweeping Europe, French women, oddly enough, have bright hopes of winning the vote within the year.

Henri Pate, vice president of the Chamber of Deputies, has introduced a bill to permit women to vote in municipal elections. While the suffragists are seeking complete equal rights with men, they want to see this bill passed, believing it will pave the way to other legislation.

The French suffragists are particularly cheered by a recent speech of Minister of Colonies Louis Rollin, who predicted it would not be long before women in France had complete electoral emancipation equal to women in other countries. This would mean that 12,000,000 French women would obtain the right to vote.

Moves Blocked in Senate.

During the long struggle of the French suffragists, 16 bills favoring woman suffrage have been introduced in the Chamber of Deputies. Many have passed there, but always met defeat in the Senate. There the ancient argument that woman's place is the home has invariably been raised to defeat the suffrage bills.

Another favorite excuse of the senators is that they do not want the women to tamper with the constitution just now, as such tampering would make for instability of government. The senators also fall back on the argument of "indirect influence"—that women exercise enough power by controlling the "bas de laine," or woolen stocking, in which thrifty Frenchmen keep their savings.

Prominent Women Enlisted.

Many prominent women in France have allied themselves with the suffrage movement. Two of the foremost leaders are the Duchess de la Rochefoucauld and Madame Louise Weiss. They have rallied to the movement the support of many prominent officials, including Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

At a recent three-day congress of the Union for the Women's Vote, Minister Rollin, and others who spoke, reviewed the recent progress of the suffrage movement and held out the hope that women would get equal rights at the polls before the end of the year.

New League's Aim Is Woman Vice President

A WOMAN for Vice President before the end of this decade is the goal of the newly organized League for a Woman President and Vice President, which has established headquarters at 286 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn.

After a woman is placed in the second executive office, there will be plenty of time to "groom" another for the Presidency, in the belief of the 3,000 men and women who have joined the organization.

Miss Lillian D. Rock, vice president of the National Association of Women Lawyers, founded the league and is confident it will have at least 300,000 members within a year.

"Many have asked the name of the woman I would put up as a candidate for the Presidency," Miss Rock said recently. "I have in mind one woman who would be capable of fulfilling the duties of either post. That woman is Judge Florence E. Allen, of Montana, a United States Circuit Court judge. My second choice would be Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury."

Other officers of the league are Elberta K. Shipley, widely known peace advocate, and Dr. Mary McGovern, radio lecturer and prominent Democrat.

Trained Voices Are Prescribed In Answering Phone for Boss

NEW YORK, Feb. 17 (AP).—If Dorothie Bigelow carries out her reforms Miss Average Secretary of the future will answer the boss' telephone calls in a "sweet, small" voice that is easily understood, instead of the nasal twang affected by so many.

Miss Bigelow, who is the daughter of Poultney Bigelow, noted war correspondent and friend of the former Kaiser, is giving a course in a New York secretarial school which she believes is the first attempt to beautify the secretary's speech.

"It is a tremendous commercial asset to any one who comes in contact with people to speak like a lady, as they say," said Miss Bigelow.

May Soothe the Boss.

"It is important for every secretary to be able to speak precisely on the telephone—and if the boss is a nerve-wracked individual who blows off steam, her ability to answer in a sweet, small, low voice may keep her from being thrown out of the office.

"You can hardly understand the average secretary over the telephone today, and they all seem to have a peculiar sort of deafness that comes from always shouting and being shouted at.

"Then there is that terrible 'telephone girl' voice. They never have learned to breathe, and as they have to talk all day long the only way they can do so is by way of the nose.

"I can't imagine where my pupils all come from, but some of the American accents are fearful and wonderful. They say 'rawr' eggs and 'warsh my hands' and 'awrnge' for 'orange.'"

English "Speak in Throats."

Educated in London herself Miss Bigelow does hot hold to the English voice as a model. The English, she said, "speak in their throats, while we Americans speak in our noses."

Some of the English, she remarked, say "refaned" for "refined," and other of the cockney school say "lydy" for "lady."

"I've heard voices on the English stage that are worse than anything I've heard here," she observed.

"Doctors and voice teachers tell me voices have been getting worse in the last few years. Everything is becoming so noisy, and people always are screaming at one another. Well-bred people today have children with gutter-mick voices who speak like little toughs. My sad conclusion is that the teachers in schools do not speak well."

Miss Bigelow believes that the proper model for a secretary would be "a sort of universal English with no American or English or colonial accents—simply good English spoken in a cultivated tone of voice."

Capital Musician Owns One of Few Examples of the Early Clavichord

Harris & Ewing.

MISS SADE STYRON,

Washington musician, seated before her clavichord, one of the very few privately owned eighteenth century instruments. The clavichord was the favorite instrument of Johann Sebastian Bach, whose 250th anniversary is being celebrated this year.

Miss Styron Interested in Keyboard Music of 17th, 18th Costumes.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SINCE 1935 MARKS the 250th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach, music lovers centering their attention on the work of the noted German composer will recall that his favorite instrument was the clavichord.

One of the few privately owned examples of the early clavichord belongs to a Washington musician, Miss Sade Styron, who is particularly interested in keyboard music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Yesterday at her studio on Mount Pleasant street, Miss Styron told something of the history of the instrument and pointed out instances of the interrelation between it and compositions of the period in which it was popular.

"First, let's go in and see my clavichord," she said, leading the way to the room where the medieval instrument stands against the wall across the room from a grand piano.

Encased in Light Green Wood.

Resting on a stand of dark wood supported by twisted legs, the clavichord is encased in light green wood (traditionally the color used for such instruments in Germany). The top is attached to the case by iron "flame hinges," also traditional with German clavichords.

"This is a genuine, late eighteenth century instrument," Miss Styron said. "It has been restored with no changes except new strings and a new sounding board."

She then proceeded to point out its distinguishing features. Its keyboard, four octaves in length. Its keys—each of which is controlled by a lever with a metal tangent that both divides the string and sets it in vibration. (It is the only instrument having such a modus operandi.)

"The clavichord was the first instrument to which a keyboard was applied," Miss Styron explained, "and, it is, therefore, a forerunner of the piano.

Mentioned in 1404.

"It has a long history. Derived from the monochord by the addition of a keyboard, it was mentioned as early as 1404 in Eberhard Cersne's 'Rules of the Minnesingers.' It was described, also, in the very first book on musical instruments, published in 1511."

The roots of its history thus established, the clavichord eventually came to be—especially in Germany and Italy in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries— a favorite of all the best musicians, Miss Styron pointed out.

"This was because it afforded such a great scope for individual expression," she said. "Perhaps this is one reason it is coming back into use, and why so many clavichords are being manufactured in England and in Germany.

"Another reason is that many persons today, delving into musical history, are eager to know how compositions of the past sounded on contemporary instruments, rather than on the piano."

Miss Styron mentioned that the clavichord supposedly originated in England. "But it was never so popular in England as in Germany," she said, "and the fact there is only one early English example in existence today perhaps helps to justify the preference for loud music traditionally ascribed to the English."

Instrument Was Favorite of Bach, Composer Born 250 Years Ago.

The harpsichord, another popular instrument of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, produces a tone entirely different from that of the clavichord because strings of the latter are struck by tangents instead of being plucked or twanged by quills, Miss Styron explained.

"The result is a singing tone, a legato, that probably caused the clavichord to be Bach's favorite instrument," she said. "Certainly many of his compositions call for an effect that can be brought out best on this instrument."

To illustrate this point, Miss Styron played one of Bach's compositions in which the "singing tone" is especially necessary for the result the composer intended to achieve.

Lines Written to Miss Styron.

The delicate notes, blending one into another, reminded the reporter of the lines Dr. Theodore Maynard wrote to Miss Styron after hearing her play on the clavichord:

"One of the loveliest
Things I have heard
Was your thin hands touching
The note of a bird,
The whisper of water,
The sob of rain,
And true love sighing
In vain, in vain."

Obviously this instrument requires more delicacy of touch than a piano, more of a feeling of inward emotion on the part of the player. Probably that explains why Robert Bridges—England's poet laureate immediately preceding John Masefield—worked out rhythms on the clavichord for his poetry.

"I treasure my instrument, not only because it is expressive but because I enjoy presenting compositions written for the clavichord," Miss Styron said. "It seems only reasonable that early music is more effective when played on an instrument for which it was composed. When rendered on the piano, the result is often something other than what the composer intended.

Yet fond as she is of the clavichord and early music, Miss Styron is fully aware of its limited power and the fact it is suitable only in a room small enough to give the performance an intimate atmosphere of delightful musical inner communion.

She came to this country too late in life to acclimate herself to conditions here, and is always talking about the way things were done in Wales, her native land.

* * * *

For the past year she has been living at a hotel. Now she wants to come to live with me. I don't want her with me, since she is never agreeable to my friends and antagonizes servants. I tried living with her for several years and things did not work out at all well. She simply drains my vitality. She talks constantly and is very critical and fault-finding.

* * * *

I do know, however, that she has only a few years of life left and I would like to do what I can and should to make her last years happy. On the other hand, I do not feel equal to the task of living with her again, even for a few years.

Mistaken Martyrdom.

DEAR TROUBLED: I am inclined to believe you should not take too seriously your aunt's professed discontent with hotel life. She is probably just as happy and well taken care of there as she would be anywhere, and is simply seizing upon it as another vehicle for expressing her characteristic fretfulness. No doubt, if she were transferred to a house with you, she would speedily find as much, if not more fault, with the new arrangement.

* * * *

It is necessary to exercise a great deal of patience and self-containment in dealing with old age, yet patience flies out the window when frayed nerves come in the door. You have learned from experience your vitality is drained to the breaking point by living with your aunt, so why repeat that painful experience?

* * * *

I believe you can contribute more happiness to your aunt's latter days if you maintain that flavor of formality in your social relationship which derives from living under a separate roof. You can be the devoted niece, always within call, without living in such proximity as to invite constant friction.

* * * *

It is an exaggerated sense of duty, almost amounting to a martyr complex, which would impel a young woman to deliberately enter upon a life of certain unhappiness on the plea of contributing to the happiness of an older woman's declining years. Your aunt has lived her life, and, judging from her present autocracy, quite in accordance with her own wishes; and you are entitled, within reason, to the same privilege.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Women's Page.

What TODAY Means

Pisces.

IF FEBRUARY 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

It is seldom advisable to put off until the morrow that which can be attended to today, even if tomorrow, Thursday, is very favorable for those born under the Zodiacal sign of Pisces. If requested to cooperate with a friend on this February 20 regarding a business or social activity, it may be advisable to do so with enthusiasm.

Turbulent reactions in business transactions can be prevented through the use of diplomacy, as well as by inferring that the "customer is always right." Conventional rules which govern polite society should be strictly adhered to in your social contacts. Carping critics are likely to be all too ready to comment on any laxity or breach of etiquette. A promising day for financial matters and negotiations, providing the element of exaggeration is eliminated in the course of conversation.

Married and engaged couples, as well as those ready to surrender single liberties for matrimonial restrictions, will find this a favorable day for practical, rather than overly sentimental conversations.

Prints Are Smartest Possible Apparel To Wear During Next Few Weeks

The brightly-patterned blouse does wonders for the woman who is inclined to look blah in a suit whenever she removes her jacket. In fact there's nothing better than a print to add dash to one's appearance.

Daisies Are Riding Crest of Fashion, Followed by Carnations; Pink Is Leading Color of Spring.

NOW IS THE TIME for every fashion reporter to come out with two positive statements to the effect that suits are good and that prints are even better for spring. But no matter how often these statements have been made before they have more significance than ever this season.

Prints really are the smartest possible thing to wear for the next few weeks. Suits will come a little later but right now it's prints and prints and then some more prints.

Floral designs are back with a bang. This idea fits in perfectly with the current trend toward prettiness and accented femininity. For what could be more sweetly girlish than a crop of daisies sprouting from the rust-colored background of a springtime ensemble? The old saying that daisies won't tell doesn't mean a thing this season. Daisies are now screaming high fashion from every little petal. Look at the costume on the left. It proves how stunning the white flower on rust background can be. Incidentally the model is wearing brown accessories and a big brown straw hat.

Daisies, though long known for their secretiveness, have never gone in for limited production. And so these prolific field flowers are thrusting their friendly little heads out of green, blue, black and white backgrounds as well as rust-colored ones.

Sunflower About Only Flower Missing.

Other common or garden variety of posies used for the new spring prints include tulips, violets, poppies, morning-glories, pansies, sweetpeas and carnations. In fact about the only thing missing is the sunflower. Carnations are only a little less important than daisies. They are lovely in pink which, by the way, is spring's leading color.

Few conventional designs are being shown. Most of the flowers look so natural it's a temptation to pick a bunch of them and stick them into a vase or basket. But there are a few exotic-looking prints. Take the black morning-glory one designed by Bianchinni, for instance. The inky blooms wander over a brilliant red or green ground. Bianchinni also has turned out a sweet pattern in which white violets clamber up a green trellis.

Most of the spring prints are built on rough, crinkly crepes. Even printed linens are woven with heavy blobs scattered over their surfaces. There are, however, a few handsome printed taffetas for afternoon and evening gowns. One of the most unusual has brilliant strawberries scattered over a black background. Another black one is splashed with tight little rosebuds. These new taffetas are called "libellule" (dragon fly) because, their designer says, "they are so light they could fly."

Most of the prints this season, because the designs are small, can be worn by buxom ladies without frightening little children. Slender women, especially tall willowy creatures, can get by with anything from violets to morning-glories. Daisies massed closely on backgrounds fairly dark in hue are better for the large figure. The overweight woman can also wear other medium-sized floral prints. But she'd better stay away from rosebuds.

Parody Contest Offers Chance For Fine Prize

Earle, Heigh-Ho and Kay Ware Afford Would-Be Lyricists Opportunity.

By Kay Ware.

Herein is a tie-in that concerns two Heigh-Ho's, sweet music, champagne cocktails, supper, free movie tickets and a good-by to a young lady named Annabelle.

In short, Pete Macias, Warner Brothers, and this column are starting a contest for parody writers. The song is "Fare Thee Well, Annabelle" from Rudy Vallee's new film, "Sweet Music," coming to the Earle on Friday. Pete got mixed up into this because Rudy says "Heigh-ho, everybody," and Pete thinks that's nice of him to do a little advertising plugging.

Anyway, you'll write out your parody, send it in, either to Mr. Macias, Heigh-Ho, or to this column. Your prize: champagne cocktails and supper at Heigh-Ho for two and two passes to "Sweet Music."

If you aren't sure how the tune goes, Marty Rubin at Heigh-Ho will sing it for you. If you aren't sure of rhythm and rhyming, here are the words, reprinted by special permission:

There's a locomotive puffin' at the station,
Fare thee well, Annabelle.
And I know you need a little consolation.
Fare thee well, Annabelle.
When you feel that you're out in the rain,
Think of me on that Pullman train,
On a cold observation car, lookin' for you in the dark, all in vain.
I will send a telegram at every station,
Fare thee well, Annabelle.
If your fam'ly needs a bit of information,
Say that I am doin' swell,
And when I come back
With a pocket full of jack,
You'll have something grand to tell
Cause I'll take you on a honeymoon vacation,
Fare thee well, Annabelle,

Mayflower's all decorated with flags and birthday cakes, smiles and congratulations. Sidney in the lounge does his bit in the anniversary festivities by featuring songs that were popular ten years ago. Brush up on your memory and get the low-down on the latest hits, for Sidney, in spite of anniversaries, never neglects them.

We've a new spot in the running now, as the Powhatan opens its "Oak Lounge." English effect, wood panels, cathedralish stained glass windows, deep sofas and other things that spell comfort.

They serve a complete line of cocktails, liquers, vintage wines, from 11 a. m. on. Two entrances, one on Pennsylvania avenue, the other through the Powhatan lobby makes it convenient to reach.

Shoreham will celebrate Washington's birthday Friday with an extra large floor show and entertainment program—details of which are not yet public.

Meanwhile, De Angelo and Porter, ballroom dancers, are topping the floor show with an interpretation of Godowsky's "Alt Wien," the wistful little Viennese waltz. Heifetz, the violinist, suggested the piece.

Another dance team, Faye and Wellington, are known as "Sweethearts of the Dance" and offer musical comedy numbers. Talbart Haslett, barytone; Conchita Morena, who does Spanish, Mexican and Portuguese dances; Griffo, the man of many noises, complete the bill.

Incidentally, Griffo is a Washington stage veteran, and if you can, get him to reminisce for you. He's as amusing a conversationalist as he is a noisemaker—and his noises are funny enough.

Barnee and band play in the lounge during cocktail hour, and in the ballroom for evenings entertainment.

Hi-Hat's contest is still going on. You try to guess what the Islanders played most often the day before. You have to be sort of a song barometer to get the prize, a champagne cocktail, but considering the prize, who cares?

The Hawaiians, incidentally, played last Sunday at a congressional function given by Delegate and Mrs. Samuel King, and former Mayor John Wilson of Honolulu.

George Benson, gold clause authority, turned up at the Willard's Bamboo Room the other day. Judging from his expression he probably thought Ernestine Gardner and Fenton Froom gold standards of vocalizing.

Pilgrim Club's show includes Andrea and Michel, dance team; Beth-Miller, singer from Radio City Music Hall; Al Winer and his Pilgrims playing for dancers.

Charel de Thomee, the French pianist and vocalist at Club L'Hiver, brought the audience to its feet the other night. Not only that—the feet were on chairs, and everyone shouted themselves hoarse about him. So he obliged with some extra selections not on the schedule.

Rosalie Roy is the type of dancer who accompanies herself with her own voice—if you can figure that one.

New Yorkers and their music, Fran Trapp and accordion, Charles Mayer and songs finish the bill.

Another news bit about the place: Monday afternoon Maryland Club Gardens inaugurated a new series of bridge parties. Six duplicate contract bridge tournaments will be given under the direction of Mr. C. E. Bishop.

Tournament fee is $1 a week, which includes luncheon at 12:30. Please make reservations at the club before Saturday.

Club Habana is full of "hey-nonny-nonny," sung by the Ohioans, vocal trio. They sing, impersonate radio stars, roll eyes and cavort in general.

Tudel and Jean, dance team, continue this week. Moe Baer, Habaneers Russ Cullen and Lou Gates are always good for music and song.

Scott and Douglas, graceful dancers, headline Madrillon's show this week. Betty Lou is the second feature with swift tap-dancing and a special version with "Hi, Toots!"

The dance team came from Baltimore's Club Manley, where they danced a straight six weeks. Their offerings include waltzing to a medley of "Merry Widow" tunes, another routine to "The Two Guitars," and a Continental that's a bit different from all the other Continentals you've seen.

Accordionists, attention! Leon Brusiloff wants a really good one to add to his band. Leon says he must be able, "to play away, and swing out," whatever that means.

Lotus is putting on another big show with 16 performers. They are Earl Lindsay's group including a feature team, Frederico and Barbara and a collection of talented chorus girls.

In honor of Bill Strickland's yachting cruise—he's just back, you know—Lotus hung a lovely back drop, all fixed up with a lake, a Chinese pagoda or two, and a soulful atmosphere.

Extra: Lotus will put on a special matinee on Washington's birthday.

LaParee's show is introduced by George Trotter, singer and M. C. Marguerite and Arthur are held over a third week. Roberts and White, a comedy team, win giggles. Dorothy Morgan and "Rahada" a specialty dancer, Marie Fowler and Ray Beck—plus Emory Daugherty complete the bill.

Jockey Club features music by Pete Pallet's boys, a negro tap dancer. Ideal spot for a laugh or two.

Broadway —Goes to Miami

By Ed Sullivan

Water Under the Bridge

(From the files of the Miami Herald and Miami Daily News.)

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 19.

February, 1925, at Miami: Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, fishing off the Keys, caught a 30-pound amberjack. Florida papers carried on Page 1 the wedding of Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor at the U. S. Grant Hotel at San Diego. Tex Rickard matched Gene Tunney, resting here, and Tommy Gibbons for Dempsey's title, vacated by his announced retirement. Secretary of State Hughes, retiring from the Coolidge Cabinet, planned a trip to Miami. A week after his mother's death, Julius Fleischmann died here at the Nautilus Polo Field in the fourth chukker. E. F. Hutton's pleasure schooner, Hussar, docked in Biscayne Bay. Passaic, N. J.'s, wonder team of basket ball, after winning 159 games in a row in six seasons, was beaten 39 to 35 by Hackensack H. S. The Associated Press reported that John D. Rockefeller and George F. Baker each scored 54 for eight holes in the golf battle of the country's wealthiest men.

Ten Years Later: Hoover in retirement after serving a term as President of the United States. Dempsey, now wed to Hannah Williams, opened his New York restaurant across from Madison Square Garden. Rickard is dead. Gene Tunney beat Gibbons and then twice beat Dempsey before going into retirement. Former Secretary of State Hughes now is the head man of the Supreme Court which passed on the gold clause. It is on the Fleischmann Hour that you hear Rudy Vallee, the vagabond millionaire. E. F. Hutton's daughter, Barbara, is the girl who provided 15,000 Christmas dinners for New York's poor. Will the Passaic players of 1925 please drop me a line and let me know where they are? The A. P. scribe who reported the Rockefeller-Baker match at Ormond Beach at present is writing this Broadway column for you. Mr. Baker is dead.

February, 1925, at Miami: Clarence Darrow, fresh from his sensational defense of Leopold and Loeb, was interviewed by local reporters upon his arrival here. Girl swimmers arriving for the Florida championship races included young Gertrude Ederle, Sybil Bauer, Aileen Riggin, Helen Meany, Agnes Geraghty and Martha Norelius. John McE. Bowman opened the Miami-Biltmore Hotel. Postmaster General New appointed six Florida postmasters. N. B. T. Roney paid $2,225,000 for the ground on which he will erect the $2,000,000 Roney Hotel. Miami Shores, one of the big real estate developments, announced in full-page ads a sales total of $3,001,789 in 49 days. Coral Gables totaled $3,001,811 for January sales alone. Young Stribling K. O.'d Joe Burke, Detroit, in three rounds.

Ten Years Later: Attorney General Wilentz, arriving here from his spectacular prosecution of Hauptmann, is interviewed by local reporters. Gertrude Ederle was later to swim the English Channel, receive a Lindbergh welcome and then fade from sight. Sybil Bauer is dead. The Misses Riggin, Helen Meany, Agnes Geraghty and Martha Norelius all were married. Miss Meany unhappily. John McE. Bowman is dead. New is no longer Postmaster General, and Jim Farley is vacationing here. N. B. T. Roney lost his $4,000,000 hotel to Doherty, and is now selling real estate here. The great Miami boom, which brought misery to thousands, ended shortly after those prodigious 1925 sales. Young Stribling, of Georgia, is dead.

Sonora, Tex., Feb. 19 (AP).—An airplane made a landing on a railroad stock car today.

The ship was unable to gain altitude after pilot Jasper Jones, of Menard, took off with two passengers.

Considerable damage was done to the plane when it perched atop the car, but neither pilot nor the passengers, Billy Penick and Tommie Barrow, of Sonora, was injured.

Tax on Sales Will Be Urged In Maryland

Veasey Plans to Offer Measure to Supplant Property Levy.

Articles Retailing for Below Dime Would Escape Charge.

By Lawrence F. Stuntz
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 19.—Senator Milton L. Veasey (Democrat), Worcester, plans to introduce in the Maryland Legislature tomorrow legislation calling for a 2 per cent blanket consumers' tax to supplant the State property tax.

Accompanying the sales tax bill will be a measure providing for a constitutional amendment forbidding any further levy on property to take care of bonds outstanding as of January 1, 1937.

The State tax on property would be reduced gradually and finally eliminated by the revenue from the sales tax, the effect of the latter being calculated to begin the reduction of the present 22-cent rate immediately.

Exemptions Proposed.

The following exemptions are proposed under the measure: purchases of any governmental agency, public institutions or semipublic corporations, alcoholic beverages on which an excise tax is collected, motor vehicle fuels now taxed, water delivered through mains or pipes, gas, electricity, steam and refrigeration.

Distributors or retailers would be prohibited from absorbing the levy. No tax would be levied on an article retailing for less than 10 cents.

A restoration of half the salary cuts imposed on Maryland school teachers would cost $174,445, State Superintendent of Schools Albert S. Cook told members of the House of Delegates here today.

Dr. Cook spoke before an informal meeting of the delegates, on invitation of Ralph R. Dennis, of Worcester County. Delegate Dennis said that most members of the House felt that teachers' salaries, cut 10 per cent in 1933, should be raised now. He pointed out that they had no raises during the boom, and yet were forced to take a cut along with other State employes.

Dr. Cook also explained that the census and attendance fund, provided by the State to help support the county school system, had been cut in the new budget, and that 10 counties which do not get any money from the equalization fund would have to raise their county tax rates. Montgomery County will need $14,881 more to keep its schools up to standard, representing an increase of 1.69 cents in the tax rate. Prince Georges County will need $18,174, forcing a tax increase of 2.8 cents.

Equalization Fund.

The equalization fund would have to be increased from $398,974 to $827,183 to restore the full salary cut, Dr. Cook said. For a restoration of half the cut it would have to be increased to $573,419. These would allow for the restoration of teachers' salaries only, and not for increasing the present pay of any other employes of the school system.

Bill changing the method of electing county commissioners in Wicomico County, reducing the cigarette traders' tax, and allowing an increased tax rate in Mountain Lake Park, Garrett County, were introduced in the Legislature here today.

The Mountain Lake Park measure authorizes the town authorities to levy a tax of $1 per $100. Under the present charter the tax can not be more than 60 cents per $100. The cigarette traders' license fee is reduced from $25 per year to $10. The reduction would do something to offset the proposed State tax of 2 cents per package on cigarettes.

Wicomico Bill.

The Wicomico County bill sets up five election districts, and provides that one commissioner shall be elected from each district. At present all five are elected at large. The election precincts of Salisbury and Parsons are included in the fifth election district established by the bill.

Another bill introduced today will permit Middletown, Frederick County, to refinance $12,500 worth of county bonds, with a consequent saving in interest. Five per cent is paid on the present bonds, while interest on the new issue is limited to 4 per cent. Members of the Frederick County delegataion said that the new bonds actually would bear even lower interest, about 3 per cent. The bonds to be refinanced are the issues of 1924 and 1931, for the town hall and the water system.

A law to prevent liquor chain stores was offered in the House. It prohibits any person or firm from having more than one liquor license in any town. A companion measure will bar any storekeeper from renting out part of his store to another person for the sale of liquor.

The University of Maryland is directed to buy the Princess Anne Academy from Morgan College for $100,000 by the terms of another bill. The money for the purchase will be given to the university in the supplementary budget. Morgan College will use the receipts to consolidate the academy, now operated as a branch of the college, with the main institution on the outskirts of Baltimore. The bill was offered as an administration measure.

A compromise has been offered in the fight to open the Potomac River to oyster dredgers, and has immediately became the target for both sides to the controversy.

The compromise was a bill to allow the use of hand scrapers, a dredge weighing not more than 40 pounds. Residents of St. Marys and Charles counties, along the river, immediately obejected that it would be as destructive of oysters as the heavier dredgers. Eastern Shore watermen objected to it because it did not give them all they wanted.

The bill was offered this morning in the House and Senate by Eastern Shore Legislatures. It allows the hand scrapes to be used from November 1 to January 1 during the daylight hours only, and imposes a license fee of $10 on every boat using the scraper. The scrape is limited to a width of 36 inches and a weight of 40 pounds.

The objections were filed this afternoon at a hearing before the House Chesapeake Bay Committee on a previous bill to open the river to all dredgers. The river was closed in 1931 when the supply of oysters was reported to be depleted.

Eugene Lloyd, of Rock Point, charged before the committee that the Eastern Shore watermen had ruined their own oyster grounds and were now anxious to spoil the Potomac River bars. Tonging in the river now is permitted and the Eastern Shoremen can make a living with tongs if they don't want to gobble up the oysters, Mr. Lloyd said.

The Eastern Shore representatives before the committee were willing that the hand scraper bill be passed, but wanted a promise of favorable consideration for another measure increasing the weight of the scraper to 70 pounds. Laws affecting the river are not effective until both Maryland and Virginia have passed them. Virginia already has approved the 40-pound scraper, so these could be used as soon as Maryland approves them. The 70-pound scraper could not be used until 1936, after the Virginia legislature has approved it.

Capt. W. L. Jones, of Crisfield, told the committee that both dredges and hand scrapers will deplete the oysters. Delegate Carl Hoffman (Democrat), Somerset, denied this and said that even the bay dredges, weighing up to 250 pounds, do not deplete the oysters. He was supported by Nicholas C. Evans, of Smiths Island, who said that dredging makes the oyster bars more prolific by cultivating them. Swepson Earle, State commissioner of conservation, said that this was true only when the dredging was done just before the spawning season.

Mr. Evans also said that the disappearance of oysters is not the cause of the lowered income of the watermen. Poorer oysters are the reason that so many boatmen are on relief, he declared, saying "there are no quality oysters in Maryland now."

Bruce Mathews, of Charles County, pointed out that in prehistoric times there had been no dredging, and yet beds of oyster shells had been found 20 feet thick. There is no basis for the use of dredges as cultivators, he claimed.

A proposal that the University of Maryland be given power to raise its tuition fees and change its allotment of State funds from one department to another was made by George M. Shriver, president of the board of regents, before the House Ways and Means Committee at a budget hearing. Mr. Shriver read his request, which already had been made to the Senate Finance Committee.

The appropriation for the university was cut by $75,000 in the proposed budget, and officials of the school were asking more money. By raising tuition charges and transferring funds from one department to another, the effects of the cut will not be so severe, Mr. Shriver said.

High Status Of Virginia's Finance Told

Tax Head Says Recent Bond Sales Reflect Good Condition.

Retail Levy 'Last Resort,' He States to Hardware Association.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—In discussing the tax situation in Virginia at this afternoon's session of the sixteenth annual convention of the Virginia Retail Hardware Association, C. H. Morrisette, Virginia State tax commissioner, said that at present the financial condition of the State is strong and its bonds have been selling to the best advantage in history.

In response to requests for information concerning possibility of a general sales tax in Virginia, the commissioner stated everything depended on whether demands of the people required larger expenditures and whether real estate owners succeeded in getting part of the tax burden transferred from real estate sales. He classified the general retail sales tax as a last resort, justified only by some emergency of magnitude.

The commissioner expressed the view net profits from the State liquor store would greatly exceed the estimated $1,675,000 which sum, he said, had been intended to represent a fair tax on hard liquors. It was stated the State is entitled not only to a fair tax, but also to fair profits.

In his annual address, B. Flournoy Tillar, of Emporia, president of the association, advocated a merchandising policy that had teeth. "Promises made to us under NRA have not been fulfilled," he said, "and instead of competitive conditions becoming better, we find them today, from the catalog and chain viewpoint, menacing and distinctly worse."

Speakers at the afternoon session were W. N. Neff, of Abingdon, and A. D. Starling, of Danville. The former discussed the profit and loss of NIRA, while the latter's topic was "Should NRA be Continued?"

At the association's annual banquet tonight Jay Winston Johns, newly elected president of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce, will speak.

Peery Studies Gold Decision

Effect of Court Ruling on Virginia Bonds Is Sought.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—State Treasurer A. B. Gathwright and Gov. George C. Peery began a study of the Supreme Court's gold decision today in an effort to determine if Virginia gold-clause bonds were affected by the ruling.

Approximately $82,200,000 of the State's outstanding bonds carry the clause.

Among the Virginia "gold" bonds are $3,500,000 in highway bonds, $2,300,000 in school and college certificates and $2,400,000 in Riddleburger refunding bonds. No gold clause is contained in the so-called "Century" bonds or other State obligations.

In the Washington opinion State obligations were classed with private issues and gold clauses inserted without the consent of Congress, were ruled invalid.

Free Water

Claimed by 29 Living Along Cavetown Pike.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 19 (AP).—Twenty-nine property owners along the Caveton pike have filed with the board of water commissioners a claim that they are entitled to free water in perpetuity.

Their claim was made last night to the board and Superintendent Albert Heard after City Attorney Ellsworth Roulette had served notice that consumers along the pike must pay their water bills before Thursday or be subjected to civil suit for three years' back rent.

The delegation, headed by Charles H. Rinehart, with the list of 29 users claiming the privilege of free water, asserted they were entitled to it in exchange for the rental of land through which the city water pipes pass.

Superintendent Heard explained at a recent meeting of the mayor and council that some consumers were entitled to free water, but stated that several score others are legally obligated to pay.

Thieves Get Purses From Two Members Of Governor's Staff

In addition to the purchase of the works of art, the committee plans also to award a gold medal likeness of Judge Payne to the artist presenting the best production.

In making the announcement Dr. Pollard disclosed that in addition to his original contribution of $100,000 which made the museum possible, Judge Payne in his will provided for the $50,000 endowment.

Democratic Club Hits Proposed Tax on Beer

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.). The Democratic Cosmopolitan Club, which recently increased its membership to more than 500, at a meeting yesterday voted against a further tax on beer proposed for this State. It was ordered that the speaker of the House and the president of the Senate at Annapolis be so advised.

Recent additions to the club membership include Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, Herbert R. O'Conor, attorney general, and James A. Young, Annapolis, clerk of the Court of Appeals of Maryland.

HOLC Resumes Its Operations

Wicker Orders Virginia Branches to Hear Loan Petitions.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 19 (AP). — State Senator John J. Wicker, jr., manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation in Virginia, today announced the resumption of consideration of applications for HOLC loans, which was suspended November 15 by a general order in the organization.

The order went out to all the branch offices today, effective immediately.

In the order, which outlined revised details of procedure, Senator Wicker said:

"In resuming operations I can not lay too much stress on the responsibility and necessity of being definitely satisfied as to the inability of the mortgagor to continue with his present mortgage or to refinance through other agencies."

Loans through the Virginia branch of the HOLC have totaled more than $32,000,000 since the establishment of the organization in the State late in the summer of 1933.

Flannagan to Fight Cut in Burley Output

Bristol, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Representative John W. Flannagan, of the Ninth Virginia District, will champion the cause of the small burley tobacco growers of southwest Virginia and east Tennessee in their fight for exemption from a further cut in production, expected to be ordered by the Government next session, he has informed R. W. McFarland, supervisor of sales of the Abingdon, Va., market.

Mr. McFarland had previously appealed to Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia to interest himself in behalf of the southwestern tobacco growers, expressing the opinion that unless they are exempted from a further reduction in acreage, the expected cut would spell "bankruptcy" for many.

Telegrapher to Retire After 62 Years' Service

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.). Charles S. Palmer, a telegraph operator of 62 years and for the last 20 years manager of the local office of the Postal Telegraph Co., has been retired with a pension, effective March 1.

A native of Waterbury, Conn., where he was born over 77 years ago, Mr. Palmer has visited in nearly every State in the Union and has worked in more than 20.

Trio Aspires To Judgeship In Richmond

Dispute Over Post May Mean Norfolk Will Get the Honor.

Gov. Peery Is Visited by Backers of Each Candidate.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Gov. Peery's choice of a successor to Justice Louis S. Epes on the State Court of Appeals today appeared to lie between one Norfolk candidate, State Senator John W. Eggleston, and three Richmonders, Judge Frank T. Sutton, jr., Henry C. Riely and Leon M. Bazile—and Richmond's failure to get together behind one man was gravely prejudicing the city's chances to land a man on the Supreme bench for the first time in 75 years.

The large amount of appellate litigation originating in Virginia's two largest cities is reported to have inclined the Governor toward a man from one or the other community, with Richmond having most of the preliminary advantage, since more than 20 per cent of the cases on the last docket were born in Richmond.

But, as has happened so often before, the bar and bench of the capital have divided, leaving the Norfolk lawyer with an advantage.

A large delegation of Richmond lawyers and business men, a group which included Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, visited the Governor at noon to urge the appointment of Mr. Riely.

A second Richmond delegation headed by Dave Satterfield, jr., saw the Governor later to put forward Judge Sutton. Thomas O. Moss made the appointment of this group, which claims to have the support of 10 of the 12 assembly members from Richmond, Henrico and Chesterfield.

Meanwhile Senator Eggleston's support has been increased by the recommendation of many groups from southern and southwestern Virginia as the field narrowed.

Judge C. Vernon Spratley, with the solid support of the Newport News area lawyers, also remained a strong contender today, and stubborn support continued in behalf of Judge James L. McLemore, of Suffolk.

7 Hurt as Cab, Car Collide

Taxi and Car Crash Near Fredericksburg; One Seriously Injured.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Seven men were injured, one seriously, when a Washington taxicab was in collision with an automobile about 9 miles south of Fredericksburg on State Route 2 late last night.

The cab was in collision with an automobile driven by J. E. Ayers, of Woodford, Va. Oliver Jones and Dave McWhirt, of Corbin, Va., and Tom Greenstreet, of Guinea, Va., were in the car with him. All suffered minor cuts and bruises.

"Scarlet Pimpernel," Starring Leslie Howard, Will Open With Midnight Preview

Thursday Night Premiere Will Echo Last Year

Five-Week Run Followed; 'Chapayev' at Belasco; Amusement Notes.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Encouraged by opulent memories of last year's experience, when "It Happened One Night," starring Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert, opened with a midnight preview on the eve of George Washington's Birthday and ran for five consecutive weeks, Manager Hardie Meakin and his associates have determined to follow the same procedure this year at RKO-Keith's Theater.

That is to say, come Thursday night and the hour of 11:26 p. m., Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon will be presented for the first time on a Washington screen in London Films' picturization of the Baroness Orczy's novel of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," which won sufficient acclaim in New York to be held over a second week at the Radio City Music Hall, largest of the celluloid cathedrals.

This preholiday showing will mark another of those continuous double-headers with no intermission between the last projection of "The Good Fairy," starring Margaret Sullavan, with Frank Morgan, Herbert Marshall and Reginald Owen, and the unspooling of the foreign-made subject.

Last of "The Good Fairy."

The final showing of "The Good Fairy" is scheduled to begin Thursday night at 9:37 o'clock. Immediately upon its conclusion, "The Scarlet Pimpernel" will be flashed upon the silver sheet.

"The Scarlet Pimpernel" was produced by Alexander Korda, maker of "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great," directed by Harold Young and is distributed in this country by United Artists.

The screen adaptation of the Orczy novel, additional dialogue and one thing and another have been contrived by Robert E. Sherwood, Lajos Biros, Sam Berman and Arthur Wimperis, a quartet of astute practitioners in the precincts of the drama who know their way about in any man's theater or studio.

For those in whose minds the title of "The Scarlet Pimpernel" needs some elucidation—if any—it may be said that the scarlet pimpernel is a small crimson flower that blossoms along the roads and byways of England. Owing to its vivid color, it bursts forth like a tiny flame at the foot of the hedgerow. Baroness Orczy chose this little blossom as the symbol of the daring band of secret adventurers whose exploits form the basis of her novel. Leslie Howard is seen in the film as Sir Percy Blakeney, head of the League of the Scarlet Pimpernel, and Merle Oberon as his beautiful French wife, estranged by his masquerade as an idle, pleasure-loving dandy, to divert suspicion from his more sinister activities. So now you know.

The Belasco's Opener.

Preliminary to the more detailed information concerning his plans which presumably will be disclosed to the local dramatic desks by Matty Radin, representing the new operators of the Belasco Theater, at luncheon in the Carlton tomorrow, it may be said that Sergei and Georgi Vasilyev, director of the Soviet film, "Chapayev," with which the Belasco will reopen as the Washington home of foreign-made films on Thursday night of this week, have been granted the coveted Order of Lenin for their distinguished work. This is an unusual achievement for any director of motion pictures.

"Chapayev," incidentally, is in its seventh capacity week at the Cameo Theater in New York.

Is Propaganda Film.

The film is described as the greatest of those documentary pictures, of which the memorable "Potemkin" was one, which describe in epic and thrilling fashion the struggle of the Russian masses against the cruelties of the Czar and his hired Cossacks.

"Chapayev," like all the other foreign films to be presented at the Belasco, will be equipped with complete dialogue titles in English. Many of the foreign releases to be seen here, of course, are spoken in English—including, for example, G. W. Pabst's filmization of Cervantes' "Don Quixote," with the great Russian barytone, Chaliapin, starred, and George Arliss' impersonation of the Duke of Wellington, exhibited under the title of "The Iron Duke." "Don Quixote" will be the second offering of the Belasco's revived season.

Beginning Friday morning, the Belasco will maintain a policy of continuous performances, starting at the customary hour of 11 a. m. A popular scale of prices will prevail.

There is no end to the versatility of the boys and girls concerned in the conduct of Loew's Fox Theater. Having only last week shattered all precedent by putting on a sunrise matinee with continental breakfast included in the price of admission—thus converting the lobby of the theater into a cafeteria—they now are engaged in entering into active competition with Director Mann and Headkeeper Blackburn and their Washington Zoo by transforming the foyer of the playhouse into a miniature zoological garden of their own.

This, needless to say, is prompted by the imminent engagement of "Sequoia" at the Fox. "Sequoia" is a unique film in which a puma and a deer are as importantly cast as any of the human players—perhaps more so. It is for this reason that Division Manager Carter Barron and House Manager Geo

Refuses to Rely on Father's Fame

A striking new camera study of the slightly sullen, brunette beauty, Katherine De Mille, talented daughter of Producer-Director Cecil B. De Mille, who declines to accept the "easy way" to stardom by appearing in pictures under her distinguished dad's direction. Miss De Mille refused an engagement in "Cleopatra" to appear "on her own" with Mae West in "Belle of the Nineties." She also turned down "The Crusades" to act with Carl Brisson and Mary Ellis in "All the King's Horses." And she is getting on!

ter-broken deer down from Philadelphia to occupy a stall in the lobby where he may be viewed by all and sundry.

Just what the deer may think about it, we hesitate to say. There need be no hesitancy, however, in expressing the suspicion that it will be a great wallop for the kiddies! And they do say that "Sequoia" is a great film. It is to be previewed this afternoon by the dramatic desks, who probably will not keep its virtues, or defects, secret. It took two years to film, incidentally.

Boom, Boom, Boom!

This space recently celebrated the extraordinary activity on the Warner Brothers-First National lot on the West Coast and bore down with some emphasis upon the fact that 5,000 people were being kept busy continuously and probably would be throughout the spring and into the summer.

This optimistic chronicle of the return of boom days to Hollywood is given further weight by the announcement from RKO-Radio that they have five feature pictures in work, two in rehearsal and a two-reeler in the making.

The RKO-Radio pay roll records indicate that 7,000 persons are being employed to carry out this production schedule—precisely twice the regular studio quota of 3,500.

All departments are running full blast and, in addition, Pioneer Productions are making "Becky Sharp," the natural color feature being photographed by the new Technicolor process, at the Pathe studio in Culver City, and Prudential Studios, recently leased by RKO, are making ready for "She," the H. Rider Haggard story to be produced by Merian C. Cooper, former Washingtonian and globe trotter.

These Are in Work.

The five features now being filmed are "Strangers All," directed by Charles Vidor, with May Robson and Preston Foster; "Star of Midnight," directed by Stephen Roberts, with William Powell and Ginger Rogers; "Spring in Paris," directed by George Nicholls, jr., with Anne Shirley, O. P. Heggie and Helen Westley; "Village Tale," directed by John Cromwell, with Randolph Scott and Kay Johnson, and "Becky Sharp," Pioneer production, directed by Rouben Mamoulian, with Miriam Hopkins in the starring role.

Ben Holmes is directing the two-reel comedy, which stars Edgar Kennedy.

The two pictures in rehearsal are "Break of Hearts," wherein Katharine Hepburn, who recently completed "The Little Minister," will star with Francis Lederer, and "The Informer," which will star Victor McLaglen.

The filum business definitely is looking up. How are you doing?

"Brewster's Millions," one of the most popular comedies the American stage has known, has been converted into a filmusical extravaganza by British and Dominions, with Jack Buchanan and Lili Damita in the co-stellar roles. It was directed by Thornton Freeland, maker of "Whoopie" and "Flying Down to Rio," on this side, and already has been accepted as a hit in England and on the continent. It is based on the play by the late Winchell Smith and Byron Ongley, now to be seen for the first time with a musical setting. "Brewster's Millions" is said to be the costliest screen production ever to come out of the British Isles.

Down-to-Last-Yacht Note.

Now that the U. S. Supreme Court has gone and done it, I'll probably have to take that 69 cents out in trade!

Postlude

Concert by the Washington Chamber Music Society in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Program: Quintet for clarinet and strings (Mozart), "An Old Castle" (Musorgski-Pochon) and movements from quartets by Borodin, Taneiev and Grieg.

One's enjoyment of this hour of chamber music naturally con-

tered in Mozart's beautiful clarinet quintet, which is rarely played. When this work was composed in 1789 the clarinet was a comparatively new instrument, and Mozart was one of the first to realize its capabilities of tone color. His attention was probably called to it by his friend, Anton Stadler, an excellent clarinetist, but a far from admirable character.

Stadler sponged on Mozart constantly, borrowing money which he never repaid and playing upon his sympathies with a whining sycophancy. Mozart not only forgave him his deceit and dishonesty, but wrote this quintet and the clarinet concerto expressly for him. Art profits, it would seem, through the weakness as well as through the strength of those who practice it.

Once he had discovered the wide compass of the clarinet and the variety of color in its registers, Mozart used its possibilities fully. Later composers have been able to do but little more with it than he did. Brahms, for example, in his clarinet quintet modeled the technique after the Stadler quintet, although the ideational content of the two works is widely dissimilar.

The idiosyncrasies of the clarinet conditioned the style of Mozart's quintet, which is graceful and light in comparison with his string quintets. Although the clarinet blends well with strings, its peculiar timbre makes it stand out from them, and it has to be used principally as a solo voice. Its aptitude for fioritura and rhapsodical flights was exploited by Mozart in delightful fashion.

From the moment that the clarinet makes its entrance in this quintet with a bubbling arpeggio, it dominates the work and imparts to it a peculiar charm of euphony and emotional buoyancy. The sentiment of the first movement deepens in the succeeding adagio, wherein the instruments sing as enchantingly as sirens. The minuet comes close to the scherzo type as Beethoven conceived it.

The final movement, with its lovely variations, reveals clearly the genius of Mozart in using simple means for great uses. The theme is merely a nursery jingle, which he skillfully develops into elaborations full of meanings and mysterious hints. Yet the melody is never so distorted that its essentially naive quality is lost, and the whole movement is a disclosure of the poetic thoughts aroused in the composer by a careless tune.

After this blithe and winsome composition, the remainder of the program seemed of relatively small moment. The familiar nocturne from Borodin's quartet in D and the clever divertimento from Taneiev's fourth quartet suffered by comparison with Mozart's little masterpiece. Pochon's transcription from "Pictures at an Exhibition" failed to convince one that Musorgski's piano suite can be improved by any instrumental combination. Only the allegro movement from Greig's quartet brought one again within hailing distance of Mozart.

Chorus of Gondoliers, Contadine, Men-at-Arms, Heralds and Pages.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Washington last evening encountered the rare privilege of enjoying approximate perfection in the theater.

In "The Gondoliers," the opening bill of its week of nine performances, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co., from the Savoy Theater in London, brought to the stage of the National Theater a magnificent concert of voice, investiture, instrumentation and acting that impressed itself ineradicably upon the consciousness of a brilliant standing-room audience as the finest interpretation of Gilbert and Sullivan the Capital ever has been vouchsafed in all the half century of the Savoy operettas' perennial popularity.

"The Gondoliers," certain officials of the local Musicians' Union to the contrary notwithstanding, is not grand opera. It is a bright and sparkling light opera that begins gaily and progresses with undiminished spontaneity and vigor through two acts that are richly studded with melody gems, alive with such tongue-twisting lyrics as only W. S. Gilbert could write and distinguished by ensembles for male, female and mixed voices that are as musically colorful as they are bright with the vivid hues of Venetian and Baratarian costumes and settings.

Betrays Authors' Trade Marks.

In many of their collaborations Gilbert and Sullivan worked in a definite style and pattern. There are indelible marks of this addiction to a more or less fixed formula in the musical devices of Sullivan, just as there are in the unique arrangement of words in the lyrics of the articulate and fluent Gilbert.

Thus more than once there asserts itself a pronounced and inescapable affinity between the libretti and scores of "The Gondoliers" and "The Mikado," its predecessor in the series of imperishable works that flowed from these inspired pens. Of the two, "The Gondoliers" is by far the more formidable from the viewpoint of the interpreting artist.

It indulges an insatiable taste for political as well as domestic satire, a penchant for almost unpronounceable and unsingable lyrics—which the Savoyards manage to pronounce and sing flawlessly and beautifully—and an enduring love for trios, quartets and madrigals in the involved, yet wholly comprehensible and delightful, manner.

That the opera which was sung last night—perhaps the least known in this country of them all—became immediately comprehensible and delightful in its every line and note is, of course, due to the superb capability of the cast and chorus that appeared in it.

Cast of Ideal Selection.

As the quartet of young lovers whose romances are threatened by the inability of the State to establish the identity of the rightful heir to the throne of Barataria, Muriel Dickson, a soprano of clear, true and flexible voice; Marjorie Eyre, a mezzo with a fine flair for comedy; Charles Goulding, tenor, and Leslie Rands, barytone, individually and collectively, win ovation after ovation by the sprightly good humor, vivacity and thorough musicianship of their performances.

The comedy role of the Duke of Plaza-Toro, is played and sung with uncommonly fine effect by Martyn Green, a comedian whose physical grace sets him apart from a majority of his craft, and the basso of Sydney Granville, in the pompous role of Don Alhambra del Bolero, the Great Inquisitor, is displayed in several of the score's most irresistibly amusing lyrical satires.

Dorothy Gill and Eileen Moody, the Duchess of Plaza-Toro and her unwittingly married daughter, whose marital problems are solved with a surprisingly agreeable finality at the very end of the last act, both add further luster to a performance of incomparable charm.

Rich Orchestration.

As all of the other bills in the week's repertoire will be, "The Gondoliers" last evening was the beneficiary of the richest orchestral instrumentation heard in Washington as accompaniment of a Savoy opera in decades on end. Strings, woodwinds, reeds, brasses and tympani were present in almost full family and, conducted with fine taste and intelligence by Isidore Godfrey, accorded both principals and chorus perfect support without ever obtruding to a point of dominance.

Last night's premiere performance in the National Capital was under the auspices of the Bryn Mawr Club of Washington and was attended by an audience brilliantly representative of the Capital's official, diplomatic and social life.

Tonight, "The Pirates of Penzance" will be the principal feature of the bill, with "Trial by Jury" as a curtain-raiser, and on Wednesday, both matinee and night, "The Mikado" will be sung.

That "The Gondoliers" is to be repeated at both the Saturday matinee and night performances should be made the occasion for red fire and dancing in the streets.

Barry Connors' delightful commentary on American family life, "The Patsy," was presented last evening by the St. Paul Players before a large and enthusiastic audience at St. Paul's Academy, 1421 V street northwest.

The play, so far as the actual reading of the Connors script is concerned, deserves utmost commendation, for the players handled the lines with facility and skill. As for being convincing, however, the actors were not so successful, especially since apparently no care was taken to differentiate in ages between parents and children.

In the title role, Louise Shea made a commendable "Patsy," who took seriously and put to good advantage the love lessons of Tony (Richard Finnin) by testing the theory on the tutor himself. Adah May Brady was sufficiently haughty to be disliked with appropriate enthusiasm. Arthur Harvey, jr., and Margaet Collins played the parents well, in spite of the obvious fact they weren't. Others in the company were Mary Catherine Connell, Martin Meenehan, Leo Brady, and John Meenehan.

Support Asked In Harbor Plan

Salisbury Chamber Urged to Back Nanticoke Basin Project.

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Support of the Salisbury Chamber of Commerce on a proposal for construction of a harbor and basin in the lower reaches of the Nanticoke River was fought by a delegation from that region yesterday.

The chamber's directors indorsed the project and will send representatives to a meeting of Nanticoke, Waterview, Bivalve and Jesterville residents Saturday, when a site for the project will be determined.

The delegation said such a harbor would provide refuge for approximately 100 small boats of that vicinity engaged in the fishing and oyster industry. Watermen have suffered considerable loss in recent years from damage to their craft by the elements for lack of a sheltering harbor, it was explained.

Representative T. Alan Goldsborough will be requested to present the proposal to the War Department with the view of having it included in the congressional rivers and harbors appropriation bill.

Hagerstown Chamber Fights Realty Tax Rise

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—The Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce today went on record as opposing a further increase of real estate taxes until all other sources have been exhausted.

The board of directors told State Senator Ernest W. Miller, of Washington County, that real estate is bearing most of the burden and that a tax on cigarettes and other luxuries should be imposed.

Cherry Pie Champion Off to Baking Contest

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Miss Louise Sullivan, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Sullivan, was on her way to Chicago today to compete in the national cherry pie baking contest as a reward for winning the pie-baking contest conducted by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Sllivan, student in the home economics department of Fredericksburg High School, baked the winning pie, in the opinion of judges, while the second award went to Miss Lucille Bowie and third honors were won by Miss Polly Williams.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, Feb. 18.

GEORGE ARLISS, who becomes any man in history he admires, is now Cardina' Richelieu, and already the camera is turning. Arliss in a long flowing red robe is kneeling, the door to his room opens suddenly and in dashes the dashing Caesar Romero. Caesar is attired like a musketeer. Arliss turns abruptly, and in his best majestic tone, says: "My son, I thought you were under arrest."

Romero is as excited as a newsboy with a genuine extra, and he shouts: "You wanted me under arrest, didn't you? I learned how you planned it. I have come here to kill you." With this remark Caesar draws his long sword and plunges toward Arliss. This is the first take of the scene. It is to be played again, but before they do, Arliss says to Romero: "Be a little careful with that sword. Never forget that you are an actor and actors should only act."

• • • •

Standing on the set, almost inconspicuous, is Maude T. Howell, holding the script of "Cardinal Richelieu." Arliss may have a different director and a different scenario writer for his pictures, but he never fails to have Miss Howell work on the script with him. He never fails to have Miss Howell on the set to watch and judge his performance. She is the person behind the Arliss throne, and it is about time she stepped forward to receive the applause she doesn't seek.

At precisely 4:30 in the afternoon, George Arliss stops work. He walks off the set briskly. He only walks slowly when acting.

MAX REINHARDT—the Herr Professor—has been trying for almost half an hour to get Dick Powell to laugh for a scene in "Midsummer Night's Dream." "You don't laugh hearty. You don't laugh like it's genuine," says the Herr Professor.

"I never laugh out loud," answers Powell. "The most I do is giggle, but my prop laugh has been good enough before." Powell's best laugh is recorded for the scene, and Dick and I get into a corner and start talking. One word leads to the naughty parody of "You're the Top" and at that, Powell lets out a loud laugh. "That's what I want!" shouts the Herr Professor. "I thought you said you never laughed." The scene was played again, and Reinhardt got his laugh for "Midsummer Night's Dream" by having another naughty parody read to Powell.

Later, the Herr Professor started to talk about James Cagney. Reinhardt declared that Cagney is the best actor in America.

Spencer Tracy and Wendy Barrie are playing in the restaurant sequence of "It's a Small World." Wendy is supposed to hurl a plate at Tracy and, of course, Spencer is supposed to duck. Wendy hurls the plate and Tracy ducks, but he isn't fast enough. The plate catches him above the right eye, and there is a wide gash.

Tracy is rushed to the studio hospital and has five stitches placed in that gash above the eye. His head and forehead are bandaged and production is called off until Tracy can appear without the bandages.

• • • •

THE next day Spencer Tracy, his head bandaged, appears at the Fox commissary for lunch. Producer Sol Wurtzel sees him and rushes over to his table. "I've been looking for you," says Sol. "I need you for a retake for 'Dante's Inferno.'"

"But I can't work, Sol," answers Tracy, pointing to the bandages. "That's just how I want you," replies Wurtzel. "There's an explosion on the boat, you're hurt, and you have to play the scene with your head bandaged." And so Spencer Tracy went to work that day—and he didn't have to make up for the role.

William Powell is holding a 6-month baby in his arms, and they are playing a scene together for "Reckless." The kid is Bob Andrews, he is making his screen debut, and he is more temperamental than Garbo. Bob stays on the set only four hours, and is permitted to work only two hours—this is the law. He gets $25 for the 2-hour working day.

• • • •

Director Victor Fleming needs a closeup of the kid's hands for a special shot. There is only one way to get it and that is when Bob Andrews is asleep. Bob is placed in his crib on the set. Director Fleming orders all the lights to be turned off. Every one is to remain absolutely silent. He is going to wait for the kid to go bye-bye. Director Fleming, William Powell and Jean Harlow sit in their chairs waiting for a baby to fall asleep. Twenty minutes of this waiting. The kid is still awake. Fleming, Powell and Harlow are dozing in their chairs.

Those released on bail are Mrs. Gertrude Mergler, Aubrey Brand, colored, and Floyd Grigsby, colored. They were arrested after local Police Sergt. Sam Hall effected warrants.

Trial will be held Friday morning before Justice B. Richards Glascock.

Perjury Charged To West Virginian

Charged with perjury, Roy Hugh Jarvis, of Morgantown, W. Va., yesterday went on trial in the District Supreme Court before Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

Jarvis, member of a prominent West Virginia family, is charged with stating under oath in civil proceedings here that a name that appeared on a bill of sale for an automobile was not his signature.

He is being defended by Attorneys Neil Burkinshaw and Nugent Dodds, while Assistant United States Attorney Irving Goldstein is prosecuting. Jarvis denied he had knowingly sworn falsely in testifying in a proceeding which involved the automobile.

Works Prove Head Play On Edge

Mile and Quarter Route Burned by Chestnut in 2:04 1-5.

Son of My Play Seen as Serious Threat in $100,000 Race.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 19 (AP).—Just to prove to the public that the Santa Anita Handicap, with its $100,000 added money, will not be a one-horse event, Head Play, handsome son of My Play, worked the mile and a quarter route today in 2 minutes 4 1-5 seconds.

It was a fine performance for the big red, indicating that Tommy Taylor, the trainer, would have Mrs. Silas B. Mason's 5-year-old chestnut ready for the comeback attempt Saturday against Equipoise, top-heavy favorite; Twenty Grand, and the rest.

Taylor brought Victorian along to win the Agua Caliente Handicap in 1930, worth $108,300, and has been training Head Play along the same lines.

Weight Taken Off.

Winner of the Preakness, the son of My Play out of Red Head, needs heavy work. Taylor has given it to him to take off surplus weight accumulated after he was retired because of a bowed tendon.

In his first start here, Head Play finished last in the Christmas Day Stakes, which High Glee won. In the second race he showed early speed, leading into the stretch, but folded up. His third venture showed further improvement as he led most of the way and then finished out of the money.

Then came the San Antonio Handicap, where he was a surprise winner over Fleam, Azucar, Sarada, and Good Goods, all nominees for the Saturday event. This was at a mile and an eighth.

Head Play's training program has closely paralleled that of Victorian's prepping work for the Agua Caliente event, and with 117 pounds up compared to 130 for Equipoise, he promises to be a serious threat.

Several others of the probable starters worked today at the handicap distance. Azucar, F. M. Alger, jr. thoroughbred, worked the mile and a quarter in 2:05 1-5.

Mate Shows Speed.

Mate, whose total earnings of $297,660, put him in a position to surpass Sun Beau's all-time record should he win here, was put through the route in 2:06 1-5; while Ted Clark, a great sprinter, owned by C. N. Mooney, went 2:06 2-5.

Equipoise, the odds-on favorite after his brilliant race yesterday in winning by a length over Twenty Grand, only to be disqualified, could set up a mark which would be hard for coming generations of thoroughbreds to match.

Ekky, C. V. Whitney's fine charger, has won $334,110 to date, and the $100,000 here would put him well ahead of Sun Beau's $376,744 total—should he win.

It still appeared that somewhere near a score of horses would go to the post, making for a cumbersome field, but a stake total almost $130,000, of which the winner will get all but $17,500.

Haight Is Off For Coast and $100,000 Race

CAL-LIF-OR-N-I-A, there he goes.

Walter Haight, of The Post staff, Washington's premier racing writer, will be stepping onto the "Lindbergh Line" plane of the Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., this morning at the Newark Airport, Santa Anita-bound.

HAIGHT.

On the same battered but trusty portable typewriter with which Haight recently ground out his entertaining and superdescriptive stories of racing and other sports at the Nation's winter playground at Miami, he will translate into vivid verbiage the running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap at Los Angeles next Saturday.

Haight will be on the scene at Santa Anita on Thursday morning to give Post readers his impressions of the prerace situation, latest developments and the newest trends among the racing fraternity on the Pacific Coast.

Watch for his first story in The Post tomorrow morning. His first article will be telegraphed en route. And then follow the developments at Santa Anita with Haight, whose racing articles pack a sure-fire punch. A charter member of the Maryland Race Writers Association, long recognized as Washington's outstanding turf authority, Haight, by his clever, often homely, style, has set a new mark for racing reporters.

Indian Pool Aces Beat Richmond College

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—William and Mary's team defeated the Richmond College swimmers here today 48-30. It was the first intercollegiate meet for the Spiders this year.

The Indians won six events, including the diving. Bill Duncan, who set a school record in the 100-yard free style last week against Duke, set a pool record here today of 57.2-10 seconds.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

THE wide open spaces of the Auditorium the other evening housed exactly 801 persons of Washington's half-million potential fight fans who came, saw and were conquered with a desire to see no more of the pugilistic offerings of Matchmaker Fats Cornell.

CORNELL.

Professional fighting in Washington hit a new low when Johnny Jadick and Fritzi Zivic waltzed through ten rounds to a decision rendered by the judges who were forced, by law, to stay to the finish.

Mr. Cornell's enterprises have been no more successful than Matchmaker Frankie Mann's, who was his predecessor in Promoter Joe Turner's employe. Washington, once a hot-bed of boxing enthusiasm, has become a sorry fight town. The reasons are manifold. Chiefly, methinks, they lie with Cornell who has shown rare poor taste in matching and presenting the available talent.

Hindsight is better than foresight in any league, but, come to think of it, this Jadick-Zivic match never did figure to be a crowd-pleaser. Hiring fighters from their clippings, as Cornell obviously did in the case of the youngest Zivic, whom he never saw in action, is risky business. Reputation Zivic might have had, but Cornell apparently failed to take into account his style of fighting as related to Jadick's.

The only sort of opposition who can make a fight with the deliberate, sharp-shooting Jadick is the aggressive, tear-in fellow who will crowd Jadick from the outset and make him fight. Cornell might have realized that. It is exactly the type of fighter which young Zivic is not. The boys may have been trying, as they undoubtedly were, but their styles are simply incompatible. Cornell, as a matchmaker, should have known better.

CORNELL'S last two shows, the Jadick-Zivic and the Everett-Boros affairs set Washington boxing back months. The 1,400 paid admissions those two alleged battles drew are a sad commentary on Washington as a fight town. Northern fighters and managers who take due notice of gates drawn here can hardly be expected to succum to Cornell's percentage lures—at least the fighters of any account.

Maybe it's not all Cornell's fault. Perhaps it's the Auditorium that contributes to the apathy of Washington's potential customers. Ill suited to watching fights, the Auditorium is hardly the type of sructure to make an audience fight-minded, what with its grand opera, its wrestling, automobile shows, dance marathons and food shows. Fans can hardly be expected to warm up to prize fights in such an atmosphere. It is about as homey as an ice floe.

Even at the Riding and Hunt Club, despite its odor of freshly-groomed and not so-freshly-groomed horseflesh, there was a grand spirit of camaraderie among both fans and fighters. Every seat commanded a perfect view of the ring and the close quarters made for the familiarity which augurs well for the success of a program. And, besides, there was Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who knew fighters.

Ahearn may have staged his poor matches but they were distinctly in the minority. He did match his fighters with an eye to spirited competition. He was forever throwing in the boxer against the fighter and vice versa and supporting his programs with local preliminary talent who filled his coffers later in main-event spots. If it is not too late, Cornell might take a tip from Ahearn.

WITH Washington boasting the most liberal boxing law in the United States, and a boxing commission that is amazingly sympathetic toward the efforts of the matchmakers and promoters, the failure of Cornell and Turner to stage pleasing shows and turn a pretty penny for themselves is no less than a reflection on their talents and business acumen.

Witness the developments in New York yesterday, where the New York Boxing Commission refused Madison Square Garden permission to match the imported Irish heavyweight, Jack Doyle, for a main bout. Doyle, the Commission said, might be able to act and sing, he might be handsome, but that was no proof that he could fight, so he would have to show his worth before given a top spot in the Garden.

Doyle came to New York at a time when boxing was at its lowest ebb and as a result of the tremendous publicity he received he represented ready money to the first promoter who could procure his services. But the Commission steps in to deprive both Doyle and the Garden of a profit.

This department doesn't suggest that the local Commission relax to the extent that any palooka can get a license for a main bout here, but the Commission already looks with sympathy on any attempt to revive local interest in boxing. Somewhere, there are probably some fighters who can fight. Cornell and Turner ought to look them up, sometime.

Goldstein's Secret Marriage Of Last September Revealed

SECRETLY wed since September 29, Boby Goldstein, the University of Virginia's former national collegiate lightweight boxing champion, yesterday revealed the culmination of a romance that blossomed on the campuses of Virginia and George Washington Universities.

Goldstein took as his bride the former Sylvnia Inez Saloman, 21, George Washington University graduate and daughter of Maurice Salomon, Washington insurance official, of 2923 Twenty-eighth street northwest.

The couple fled a house party on the campus at Charlottesville un attended to marry at Richmond in an Orthodox Jewish ceremony.

A former captain of the University of Virginia boxing team and its most illustrious boxing figure, Goldstein reigned as Southern Conference featherweight champion for two years and as the Conference lightweight champion for one year. He captained the team in 1932, the season in which he won the national collegiate lightweight championship. He lost but one bout in his collegiate career.

Goldstein graduated from McKinley Tech High School here, winning fame as an amateur boxer before entering Virginia. Upon his graduation from the Charlottesville institution, he entered George Washington University to take a law course which he is finishing at Columbus University, where he is coaching the boxing team.

Mrs. Goldstein, a frequent visitor to Charlottesville house parties, graduated from George Washington, where she majored in English, last June. She figured prominently in dramatics at G. W. U. and was a member of the cast of the Troubadors.

An enthusiastic followed of her future husband's college boxing career, Mrs. Goldstein joined with him in frowning upon a professional career in the ring, despite his several attractive offers to turn pro.

G. W. Frosh Defeat Western High Five

The George Washington Freshman basket ball team won its twelfth game in 15 starts this season by trouncing Western High's runners-up to the interhigh championship, 24 to 13, on the G. W. floor yesterday. It was the Freshmen's last game of the year. The only defeats of the campaign came at the hands of Tech High School twice, and of the Quantico Marines.

Western offered considerable resistance in the first half, but folded up completely in the later going. The count was 7 to 7 at the end of the first quarter, but with the start of the second period Pete Yurwitz, a New York City products, dumped a 2-pointer to give the Colonials the lead, which they held to the finish.

The score was 13 to 10 at halftime, baskets by Tommy Allen, Western forward, chiefly keeping the high school in the running. Western was held without a point in the third quarter, while the collegians were netting 7. George Washington coasted through the final chapter.

Joe Hanley, Western's all-high second team choice, was held to 1 point. The high school boy showed anything but all-high form in scoring, but held big Laverne Liddicote, of the Freshmen, to only 4 points. Phil Maloney, Western's all-high guard, was on the sidelines and did not see action.

D. C. Handball Champ Winner at Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 19 (AP).—George Nelson, of Washington, D. C., the defending champion, defeated Bob Frederick, of Memphis, 21-1, 21-4, today in the opening round of the National Y. M. C. A. handball tournament.

PWA to Build Ball Parks—Maybe

Hundreds to Spring Up Over Nation if Fund Is Granted.

Minor League Officials Plead Employment, Aid to Youth.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 19 (AP).—Baseball parks will spring up like mushrooms all over the United States this summer if the Federal Government approves and finances a plan indorsed here today by promotional moguls of the major and minor leagues.

The plan, conceived and outlined by Joe F. Carr, promotional director of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, calls for the appropriation of enough PWA funds to construct 400 parks. The promotional chiefs want the Government to set aside the money from the four-billion-dollar fund being considered by Congress.

Judge W. G. Bramham, of Durham, N. C., chief of the minor leagues; Bobby Quinn, of Brooklyn, representing the National League; L. C. McEvoy, of St. Louis, spokesman for the American League, and Warren Giles, of Rochester, of the minor leagues' executive committee, heard Carr's outline of the plan.

Repairs Planned.

At a cost of $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 old parks would be renovated and new ones constructed, in the proposed program.

"The committee approved the plan, and promised that it would be pushed vigorously so that we can get a Federal okeh and get started soon," Carr said.

The meeting, called by Carr, was for the purpose of reviewing last year's accomplishments along the promotional line, and to map out a program for 1935. The committee was given its usual appropriation of $15,000 for the year, but Carr said no decision was reached on just what to do with the money.

The promotional director's baseball park plan, he says, would place minor league teams in practically every city of any size, and the park construction work would provide jobs for hundreds of men, in line with the Government's program.

Boon to Hopefuls.

Such enlargement of the minor league scope would give an opportunity to hundreds of boys to play professional baseball, Carr said.

"In most instances the parks would be self-liquidating projects, for in addition to their use for professional baseball, they would be the center of all athletic activity in the communities, where entertainment of all kinds could be produced to build up the morale of the people.

"Notwithstanding the depression there is a vast growing demand for baseball as a means of entertainment throughout the country, as is shown by the fact that during the last two years seven new minor leagues were organized and functioned with success. In addition, the leagues already in existence increased their business, and it is expected that at least five additional circuits in various parts of the country will be organized for operation in 1935."

Spider Five Wins Hard Game, 25-21

Foul Shots Aid in Victory Over Generals.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 19 (AP).—The undefeated University of Richmond basket ball team took advantage of foul shots, then turned back a last-minute spurt by the Generals to defeat Washington and Lee here tonight, 25 to 21, in a hard-fought game.

Both teams were wary at first and handled the ball carefully throughout most of the initial period. As a result, the score at half-time stood: Richmond, 10; Washington and Lee, 7, and it apparently was anybody's game.

Iler and Smith were outstanding for the Generals, while Hash, Lacy and Leverton carried the brunt of the Spiders' attack. However, there was little individual starring on either team.

Tigers Toss Seven, Get Pair of Shoes

Detroit, Feb. 19 (AP).—"Boots! Boots! Boots!" has become the glum refrain of Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers.

Last summer, while the Tigers were fighting their way to the American League championship and finding the going tough, the impulsive Mickey cracked loose with a promise to buy every member of the squad shoes if they won the pennant.

It wasn't recorded whether that offer turned the trick, but the Tigers did win the pennant and today Manager Cochrane was arranging to pay off—20 pairs of shoes at $16.50 a pair!

50 Ring Aces In Collegiate Tourney

Nine Institutions Will Be Represented in Dixie Conference Tilt.

By Bill McCormick.

MORE than half a hundred of the South's finest fisticians, representing nine colleges, will compete in the Southern Conference boxing tournament at Charlottesville, Friday and Saturday. Every conference school but V. M. I. will have sturdy entrants to make assaults on the championship held for four consecutive years by the University of Virginia.

Only four of last year's champions will be on hand to defend their titles—Archie Hahn, Virginia's 115-pounder; Gordon Rainey, 125-pound co-captain of the Cavaliers; Maynard Womer, Virginia's welterweight, and Stewart McCaw, Maryland 175-pounder.

Both Virginia and Maryland, the championship team and the team that held it to a 4-4 tie last week, will be represented by full strength of eight men. North Carolina, one of the strong contenders, which was defeated by Virginia in a recent dual meet, also will muster its full strength for the tournament.

Duke to Make Bid.

Duke, generally conceded an almost even rating with Maryland in the fistic fiesta, will have seven men in the jousting; South Carolina, six; North Carolina State, five; Clemson College, four; Washington and Lee and V. P. I., two each. V. P. I. will not be represented in the tourney.

Six competitors will attempt to push Archie Hahn, of Virginia, from under the 115-puond crown which now adorns his ringwise little head. Leading the onslaught against the mighty mite will be Maynard Diehl, North Carolina, who defeated Hahn in a dual meet this season.

Jackie Williams, Clemson; Abe Alterman, Duke; Jimmy Young, Maryland; Lorenzo Taylor, South Carolina, and Charles Hull, V. P. I., also will participate in the flyweight division.

Seven featherweights will attempt to lift the 125-pound title

Indiana's Legislators Kill Pari-Mutuel Bill

Indianapolis, Feb. 19 (AP).—The House today killed the bill which would have legalized pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog racing in Indiana. A minority committee report recommending indefinite postponement of the measure was accepted by a vote of 47 to 34.

Ruth Arrives Today, His Future Uncertain

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (Spl.).—If, when a certain ocean liner docks here tomorrow morning or afternoon, you were to be on the pier and went to the letter "R" you would see there, surrounded no doubt by a perfect pyramid of baggage, a large, burly individual, in a tan polo coat and cap, sweating a little perhaps as the cold-eyed customs men thumb through his belongings. (This is a national characteristic and not restricted to our hero; one sweats under those circumstances whether one has anything undeclared or not.)

This individual will be treated with great respect by the customs officers, but the frisk will be just as tough, in fact tougher. They will say—"Now, Mr. Ruth, will you just open up these fifteen trunks . . . you say that this has been worn by Mrs. Ruth. Looks mighty new. Ahem, Mr. Ruth, may we see those shirts listed on this declaration? What is in those big suitcases over there, Mr. Ruth? By the way, Mr. Ruth, are you going to play baseball this year?" And that last will be the only question the boys will shoot at him that he will not be able to answer.

The Babe may find himself a victim of the ancient but inexorable law of supply and demand. What the New York Yankees or any other club could use, a pinch hitter who can come up to the plate and terrify an opposing pitcher into a cold sweat in a crisis, he will not sell. What he offers, a manager for a major league ball club, everybody has.

What Will Happen?

What is going to happen? Somebody must give way. The 16 major league clubs have their contracts signed with their managers. The Babe, when he left for Japan had his mind made up that he would never warm a bench until some manager saw fit to inject him into the picture. The question whether the Babe plays ball or golf this coming season, I should judge, rests with him.

The adroit merchant, when he discovers that he has a drug on the market, usually changes his line. There is a third alternative open to Ruth, to retire, live on his fortune, travel, play golf, and enjoy life. But how can a man be happy living away from something he has done with gusto for 20 years?

I do not hold with those who picture Ruth as ill-treated by baseball and who claim that baseball owes him a job for what he did for baseball. It is a pleasantly sentimental theme upon which to expand on a dull afternoon, but it won't hold water.

Nobody owes anybody a job, or gratitude, for having worked for them in the past unless they have been shamefully underpaid for that work. I think the Babe would be the last one to suggest that he had not been sufficiently rewarded for his work.

"Saved the Game."

He did much for baseball; baseball did much for him. To point out that he saved the game after the Black Sox scandal and therefore should be specially rewarded is

'Jo-Jo' Lawler Will Coach Mounts

Former C. U. Athlete to Replace A. J. Malloy at Emmittsburg.

MOUNT ST. MARY'S COLLEGE athletic officials last night announced the appointment of Joseph L. (Jo-Jo) Lawler, former Catholic University athlete, as head coach of football, basket ball and baseball at the Emmittsburgh School, succeeding Arthur J. Malloy.

Malloy resigned at the close of last football season to devote all of his time to other duties. He also serves as dietician of the school. In the new plans outlined last night, J. Earle Bender will continue to serve as graduate manager of athletics.

Lawler has enjoyed phenomonal success at Jessup (Pa.) High School where he began his coaching career in 1925 after graduating from Catholic University. His football teams won 68 out of 84 games, and the 1934 eleven escaped undefeated.

His last team was selected as the alternate for a post-season game in Miami, which was awarded a Pittsburgh team.

Cleveland Signs Two; Berger Still Is Holdout

Cleveland, Feb. 19 (AP).—Two more regulars of the Cleveland Indians Baseball Team have signed 1935 contracts, the club's managers reported today. The newest names on the dotted line are those of Bill Knickerbocker, shortstop, and Sammy Hale, second baseman.

Only three members of the tribe's roster have failed so far to sign contracts. They are Pitchers Monte Pearson and Thorton Lee, and Infielder Boze Berger.

Neyland Sails to 4-Year Exile From Gridiron After Tenn. Career of 7 Losses in 9 Campaigns

'Good Soldier' Begins to Realize How He'll Miss the Game.

By Eddie Brietz.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (AP).—Maj. Bob Neyland, who put the University of Tennessee on the national football map in box car letters, sailed today into a sort of gridiron exile.

With Mrs. Neyland, he left on the transport Republic for Panama to begin a four-year hitch in the regular Army after nine flaming years at Tennessee, during which his brilliantly-coached teams dropped only seven games while winning more than 60.

The major is a good soldier and when he gets his marching orders he packs up and marches, but does he wish he was heading back to Knoxville and the Tennessee campus instead of to far-away Panama City?

"You know," he said, as he stood on the Republic's big deck and said goodbye to a dozen old Army and football friends, "you just can't guess how much I am going to miss football.

"Even I didn't realize it until recently. But when you have lived with the game as long as I have—well, it's going to be pretty tough. The worst of it is that because of atmospheric conditions you can't get decent reception on the radio down where I'm going except now and then. I'll be down there wondering what Tennessee is doing—and I won't be able to find out until I get the papers a week or so later."

Somebody asked the major what he is going to do with himself on Saturday afternoons.

"Blessed if I know," he answered. "I guess I'll go fishing. They tell me the fishing is very good down there. But I'm wondering if I'm going to be able to sit still and fish on Saturday."

Although Neyland starred at end during his Army days at West Point, two of the three outstanding players he developed at Tennessee were backs. They are Gene McEver, now coaching at Davidson College, and Beattie Feathers, starring in professional football with the Chicago Bears.

Herman Hickman, a gigantic guard, last season with the Brooklyn football Dodgers, was Neyland's best line man, and he thinks there never will be another like burly 250-pound Herman.

Neyland couldn't resist a parting "I told you so!" as the Republic's whistles screeched and the "all aboard" cry rang out.

"What did I tell you about that kid, Howell?" he yelled as the landlubbers scurried ashore.

When he brought his volunteers to New York to meet Fordham early last season, Major Neyland in reminiscing about his stay at

Nothing to Do but Fish in Panama as His Old Team Sees Action.

Salary Boost Amounts to $10,000

Accord With Ruppert Is Speedily Reached at Conference.

1934 Clouting Feats of Star Recognized by Yankee Owner.

By Jack Cuddy.
(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Iron Horse Lou Gehrig, the New York Yankees' durable first baseman and outstanding player in the American League, today became baseball's highest salaried regular when he signed a one-year contract for $33,000.

This surprising salary figure was learned exclusively tonight by the United Press from an indisputable source. It gives the brown-haired, broad-shouldered 6-footer a straight-away boost of ten grand for his tenth season as regular with the Yanks. He had received an annual $23,000 on the two-year contract that expired last autumn.

The size of Lou's salary was quite as unexpected as the speed with which he and Col. Jacob Ruppert came to terms today during their first huddle at the latter's brewery. Business Manager Ed Barrow also was present at the half-hour conference.

Demanded $35,000.

When Gehrig arrived last week from a world tour, he announced that he would demand at least $35,000, the same as paid Babe Ruth in 1934, or else——. But the Yanks' initial contract offered only $27,000. It seemed that another long holdout battle was in the offing, like the one in 1933 when Lou signed several days after the training season opened in March.

Had Gehrig accepted the $27,000, his salary would have been the same for 1935 as that of Al Simmons, the Chicago White Sox Polish pellet pounder. But his boost to $33,000 places 31-year-old Columbia Lou in a class by himself as far as current regulars are concerned, now that Ruth has virtually dropped out of the picture. Simmons is relegated to second place among the high salaried.

Moreover, Gehrig joins the select circle of players who have received $30,000 or more for a single season's work. This group includes Ruth, whose top figure was $80,000; Rogers Hornsby, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Hack Wilson and Simmons.

Led Loop Sluggers.

Despite the semidepression that continues in the national pastime, and despite the Yanks' comparatively poor season at the gate in 1934, Col. Ruppert apparently took into consideration Lou's brilliant accomplishments last year. Gehrig wound up the season as the American League's leading batsman, home run king, and procurer of the most total bases. In addition, he stretched his all-time record for playing consecutive games to 1,504.

Neither Ruppert nor Barrow would reveal the amount of their first sacker's salary. But both expressed pleasure over the deal, after the signing. And Gehrig was so jubilant that it was evident he had obtained more than he actually expected when he made the $35,000 demand.

Col. Ruppert announced "Gehrig signed a one-year contract. All parties concerned are perfectly satisfied." Lou said, "They treated me fine. No! No! I can't say anything about the amount."

Like Happy Family.

Because the three conferees appeared like members of a happy family, most New York baseball writers figured that they had compromised at $30,000. But such was not the case. Lou got just $2,000 less than he asked, which probably is some sort of a record.

Certain player-managers like Joe Cronin, Bill Terry and Mickey Cochrane receive more than $30,000—but Gehrig is the only regular above that figure now.

With Gehrig in the fold, the Yanks have only two major holdouts to settle with: Ruth, who arrives tomorrow from a world tour on the liner Manhattan, and Pitcher Lefty Gomez, who is still in Europe. Only recently Ruth reiterated in Paris that he would not play another season as a regular with the Yanks or any other club. He wants a manager's job. Even if the Yanks induce the Babe to remain as a utility outfielder, there is little chance that his salary will be more than $30,000.

King's Park Victor.

Glasgow, Scotland, Feb. 19 (AP).—King's Park finally defeated Ayr United today, after three stalemates, to advance to the third round of the Scottish Football Association Cup competition. The score was 2 to 1.

New Pitcher Dean Is Braggart Also

San Francisco, Feb. 19 (AP).—A baseball pitcher, 23-year-old Oscar "Farmer" Dean, who boasts the distinction of having a manager, today signed a contract with the Mission Reds, of the Coast League and modestly stated he would "win 20 games this season."

Dean isn't related to the brothers "Dizzy" and "Daffy" Dean, also pitchers, nor to "Man Mountain" Dean, the Georgia wrestler, but he's like the Deans when it comes to talking.

"He's just like 'Dizzy' when he signed with the Cards," said Manager "Gabby" Street, who once handled the St. Louis pitcher.

Beaver Dam Again Scores Upset to Win Hialeah Feature Race

11-to-1 Shot Goes to Top In Stretch

Nice Talk, Favorite, Is Second; Turf Mark to Kindacorn.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Beaver Dam, which deserted the plater ranks last Saturday to win an allowance affair at odds of 35 to 1, came right back with another surprising effort here today to score at 11 to 1. Flying the silks of T. S. and J. S. Mulvihill, the gelded son of Nocturnal responded to Wayne Wright's stretch call and outfinished the favorite, Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Nice Talk.

The pair crossed the line a half-length apart, while three lengths farther back came William Sachsenmaier's Epaulet to ear n shaw position from the slow starting but impressive finishing Chief Mourner. The track had dried out to fast condition for this race and the winner covered the 7 furlongs in 1:25 2-5. Of the eight 3-year-olds that started, Nice Talk, Chief Mourner, Scarp and Red Ensign are Florida Derby nominees.

Epaulet in Front.

Epaulet ran down Chance Ray early and opened up a comfortable advantage approaching the stretch turn. Nice talk and the lowly regarded Beaver Dam then made their bids, with the long shot having the more left for the final drive. Epaulet stopped badly. Chance Ray, which had been on the shelf since last April at Jamaica, ran in promising style off fast morning trials. He may carry his speed farther with the benefit of this race.

Another turf course record was shattered when Kindacorn, paying $7.80, won the fourth race by three lengths in 1:58 1-5, two-fifths of a second better than flying Dere's mark. Shot and Shell was just as easily second over Chatterdoo, while Marion, the favorite, never could menace. Kindacorn lacked early speed and went wide at the first turn. She gradually improved her position and Jimmy Lynch, who rode a triple the previous day, saved a lot of ground at the home turn. His mount easily drew into a wide lead.

Prosy Takes Open.

The Manhasset Stable's improving 2-year-old, Prosy, recorded a hard-earned victory in the opening dash of three furlongs here today. Under a perfect ride oy Earl Porter, the $10.30 for $2 shot caught the heavily-backed favorite, Empty Bottle, a few strides from the finish and won going away by a good head. Empty Bottle set the pace and held on courageously to save the place by a length and a half from the even running Transit Lady. The winner made the good time of 0:34 1-5.

Favorite players broke the ice in the third event, which went to Broadsword under a strong ride by Johnny Gilbert. The $5.10 choice took the track in a few strides and never hesitated, passing the judges four lengths to the good. Squeeze Out surprised by racing with the leaders all the way. She lasted to beat Doris B., one that was in close quarters, by a neck.

Booms Pal found a field he could beat in the mile and a furlong test sixth on the card. The H. H. Battle color bearer moved up to Sleepy Joe in the stretch and moved away from the latter, winning by three lengths. Sleepy Joe, used up racing with Tight Wad, tired, but was an easy second over Annarita. Flying Dere was a poor fourth. The winner paid $11.10.

Neyland Embarks To 4-Year 'Exile'

Tennessee, said Dixie Howell, the passing expert of Alabama, was the best back his nine teams had faced and was sure-fire all-America material.

At that time nobody was giving Howell much of a tumble and the major's statement caused a polite titter among Southern sports experts. Then Howell came along to steal the show in the Rose Bowl against Stanford.

His stay in Panama is for four years, but the Major hopes to be back at Tennessee much sooner than that. Coaching duties there have been left in the hands of his two lieutenants and the stage will be all set for a return if his Army engagement can be shortened.

McLennan Officiates At Washington Park

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Charles J. McLennan accepted the position of racing secretary and handicapper at Washington Park, Homewood, Ill., and Arlington Park, Chicago, it was announced here today.

McLennan, one of the most popular of younger officials, is racing secretary and handicapper at Hialeah Park. At the close of the Miami Jockey Club meeting he will assume a similar position at Arlington Downs, Tex.

McLennan comes from a racing family. He more outstanding official on the turf than his father, the late Joseph McLennan, former Hialeah official, whose memory will be honored here Saturday with the running of the McLennan Memorial Handicap.

Columbia Engine Company No. 4 courtmen of Alexandria are without a game tonight and anxious to book a strong unlimited five. They have the armory court. ## At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 19.

The boss sent me this wire today: "Take plane for Santa Anita. Dig up the winner for that big race or else." I rushed right back to the hotel before he got a chance to do any second thinking. The fact that I'm taking a breather on the West Coast doesn't mean that I'm throwing you Florida players flat. Good old Clocker Mike will be right here on the job. In fact, he says he's going to pick me right out of the paper. Of course, he will have Trainer Joe to help him. I'm giving each of them a bank roll, and, with a chance to get in action tomorrow, they are both dancing around the room tonight. Trainer Joe is additionally happy because he can sleep in my bed. You know he hasn't been home for three nights—ever since he made his landlady lose her bank roll on Sun Monk. I'll be seeing you next week. Good time Hialeah, better time Santa Anita. BILL.

First race—Postscript has shown excellent form of late and threatens to win on his own. His last victory resulted in a positive sallva test. Gets in light for this sprint. Corrymeela has been sharpened up and is dangerous. It is not beyond the realm of possiblities that old Stone Martin will go well at 7 furlongs.

Second race — Riatue, disqualified winner at this course, should graduate in this company. Wright will do the guiding. Krona has had several chances and seems second best here. Sylvia G. to take care of the others.

Third race—Ding Bin, a recent winner, is packing a lot of speed these days and should come back with another victory. Aegis, the bad actor, may be the sleeper of the field. Understand his ailing dogs have been reconditioned. Flint Shot to take show award.

Fourth race—Miss Careful is asked to carry topweight in this field, but I believe she has a grand chance of upsetting the apple cart. She has good works and excellent races to recommend her. Tutti Curio, with Meade aboard, is dangerous. Vera Cruz might surprise, breaking from the rail with only 95 pounds.

Fifth Race — Miney Myerson, which once raced at Charles Town, has been fairly consistent hereabouts and deserves the call over this kind especially at 6 furlongs. Main Chance has some nice trials and will be a keen factor. I'm not entirely satisfied that Sun Monk can't figure prominently here.

Sixth race—Chancing and Evergold should fight it out for the main portion of the purse in this mile. Both are fit and ready but the weights favor the first named. Guapito, imported from Chile, is said to have won more than a dozen stake races in his native land. Might be a sleeper.

Seventh Race—Slavka appears to be the improving sort and turned in a nice win for us recently. Arcaro will be in the saddle tomorrow and I expect no mistakes. Cristate is much better than that last effort.

Eight Race—Xandra can win a race of this sort and I believe he has the disappointed Potion to beat. Yellow Metal has an outside chance.

E. R. Bradley to Sell Yearlings at Saratoga

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 19 (AP).—E. J. Tranter, president of Fasig-Tipton Co., announced today that he had closed with Barry Shannon, manager of E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour Farm, to sell all the yearlings at Saratoga, N. Y., on the night of Thursday, August 8.

This is the first time in history that Idle Hour Farm has sent its yearlings to the open market. Heretofore all have been trained and raced under Col. Bradley's colors.

Col. Bradley has between 60 and 70 horses in training and is taking this step in order to keep his racing stable down to the point where it does not become too great a burden.

Koenecke Is Signed.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 19 (AP).—The Brooklyn baseball club today announced the signing of Len Koenecke, outfielder.

County's Honors To Mount Rainier

Hyattsville Is Defeated, 19-15; Scott Star.

Mount Rainier High School's basket ball team yesterday won the Prince Georges County scholastic championship by downing Hyattsville High, 19 to 15, in a bitterly contested struggle in Ritchie Coliseum at the University of Maryland.

The game was the third of a series between the quints, Mount Rainier having won the first and Hyattsville the second. Victory carries with it the right to represent the county in the Maryland State title tournament starting about March 1.

A second team was started by the Mounts and at the first quarter Hyattsville was leading by a 4-1 count.

Coach Perry Wilkinson inserted his regulars at the beginning of the second quarter and, led by Capt. Tillie Scott, Mount Rainier enjoyed a 19-6 lead at the half.

Scott counted 12 of his team's points, with 4 court goals and 4 free tosses. Clinton Quantrill, lanky center, with 6 points, was Hyattsville's best scorer.

Artie Boyd to Replace Guyon as Eastern High Court Mentor

Loop Champs Will Retain Regulars

Only One Player of Last Year's Unbeaten Team Lost to Quint.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eastern High's inter-high basket ball champions will have a new coach next year, it was disclosed yesterday. The new coach will be Tech High's erstwhile court mentor, Artie Boyd, two days old as track coach at Eastern. School officials said that the change "in all probability" will be made next fall.

At the same time, officials said that all but one member of Eastern's unbeaten series champs will be back in uniform next year. Only Gay Edelin, All-High forward, will be among the missing when Boyd calls out the squad in the late fall. It had been generally believed that Chick Hollidge and Bill Bucholtz, regular forwards, and probably Buddy Shaner, center, would be lost by graduation.

With Captain Lavelle Dean and Fred Scheible returning as guards, Eastern's 1936 prospects are brighter than a team has had in Washington in many a year. Although Boyd will act as assistant football coach, he will have time to get the basketball squad practicing without the delay caused when the sport has been handled by the head football coach.

Has Work Aplenty.

Guyon's duties as football and baseball coach are felt to weigh him down with enough work for one athletic year, and the gray-haired chief himself is not particularly enthused about carrying a third sport. He took over basket ball this year to fill the vacancy left by Mike Kelly, former Eastern coach, now instructor of cadets.

Without a competent leader to whom he could relinquish his basket ball cares, Guyon would have continued as coach, but Boyd's shift to Eastern is said to have changed his mind on the subject. Boyd's teams at Tech were consistent title contenders, and twice won the interhigh championship.

The former Tech mentor was busily engaged yesterday in getting acquainted with his new surroundings. Between instructing on the one hand and classifying track equipment on the other, he found time to talk over thoroughly the athletic situation at Eastern with Guyon. School officials as well as Guyon were open in their gratification at getting the experienced Tech coach on the Eastern staff.

Boyd will not issue a call for the track squad for three or four weeks, but is already mappin out plans for the season.

Berlinger Faces Heurich's Sunday

Barney Berlinger, American Olympic star, will display his prowess on the basketball court when the Penn Athletic Club meets the Heurich Brewers Sunday afternoon at the Heurich Court.

Standing 6 feet 4 and weighing some 200 pounds, Berlinger, the decathlon expert, will collaborate with four other former college basketball aces in an effort to stop the two-game winning streak of the Brewers, who defeated the New Britain (Conn.) Mules Sunday a week ago and the World Champion Sphas last Sunday.

A familiar figure in local college circles, Ed White, captain of the 1934 Catholic University team, will be with the invaders. Cy Peterson, former pitcher of the Athletics; Buzz McDonald, both former University of Pennsylvania basket ball luminaries, and Jim Osborne, of St. Joseph's, also will be in the Penn A. C. line-up.

In the preliminary, the Stonewall Democratic Club, South Atlantic champions from Baltimore, will engage Sholl's, 1932-33 District A. A. U. champions.

Graduation to Cripple Handley High Eleven

Winchester, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—Graduations will cut into the ranks of Handley High School athletes this year with the gridiron outfit feeling the loss more severely than other teams.

Thrift, of the backfield; Dick Lineburg, end, and Earl Armel, center, will be lost because of the recently accepted Cumberland Valley Athletic League ruling which prohibits players of more than 20 years old. In addition to these, Carter Baker, captain during the past season, and a stalwart tackle; "Bungy" Grim, tackle; Ralph Stimmel, quarter back; Rudolph Crisman and Thurston Clevenger, all members of the varsity, will be lost through graduation.

Mrs. Drennan Defeats Miss Bauer in Tourney

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Estelle Drennan, Tulsa, Okla., and Miss Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., today continued the golfing duel they started at Nassau, Bahamas, last Saturday and provided the only upset of the first-round matches in the annual Florida women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Brennan, who is Oklahoma State champion, defeated Miss Bauer in a thrilling 2-and-1 match to enter the second round.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (AP).—With an international final looming more definitely than before, the first five seeded players in the twenty-eighth women's national indoor singles tennis championship today moved up to the third round, bowling over their opponents in straight sets.

Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, France's second leading player, achieved an almost flawless victory in allowing Mrs. Leroy Campbell, of New York, only 15 points in two love sets.

Of the seeded American players who stand against her, only Jane Sharp, of Pasadena, Calif., had difficulty in upholding form. Suffering from a heavy chest cold, the California girl weather a stormy first set to conquer Mrs. J. V. Cremonin, an unranked Metropolitan player, 7—5, 6—2.

The three other American seeded players permitted their opponents to take only five games. Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, seeded No. 1, defeated Mrs. Frederic R. Harris, of New York, 6—2, 6—1; Norma Taubele, the defending title holder and No. 2, cut down Elena Cicone, of Boston, 6—1, 6—1, and Helen Pedersen, national girl's champion and No. 4, whitewashed Mary McGusty, of New York, 6—0, 6—0.

5 Games Dropped.

Apparently having familiarized herself with the conditions of the Seventh Regiment Armory board courts, Mme. Henrotin showed no signs of the spasmodic carelessness that marked her play in the opening round. She made her challenge for the American title more formidable by scoring on repeated service aces and making her flat forehand drives count heavily for placements.

The French player will receive her first severe test tomorrow when she engages Miss Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., in one of the quarter-finals. It will be a match between hard hitters for the American girls' champion is noted for her powerful shots.

N.Y. Chiefs Tell Doyle to Get Reputation

Irishman Must Earn His Garden Chance With Fists, Not Voice.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (U.P.).—Jack Doyle, the Irish thrush with a jig step and big blue eyes, can not sing, clog or act his way into a major fight in New York State, the athletic commission ruled today.

The versatile Cork clouter's knockout record built up abroad and brought to this country recently for a campaign to be directed by Jack Dempsey is not accepted as proof of big-time ability.

He will have to start from scratch by making satisfactory preliminary appearances in keeping with regulations governing the debut of a foreign boxer to avoid the indignity of appearing among the fillins in New York, or he can box in other States to get a reputation.

The New York commission, in the latter case, would consider his record for what it was worth and pass on his eligibility to go the route where the firing is fiercest.

Must Build Up Elsewhere.

The commission's stand puts an end to rumors that Dempsey and Walter (Good Time Charley) Friedman, who discovered Doyle in his native Ireland and brought him to America, would begin their proposed build-up campaign in New York.

John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission said Doyle's record abroad does not warrant his appearance in a major fight, because his 30-odd knockouts were scored against amateurs and unknown professionals in Ireland.

"The same rule enforced when Mr. Seaman Watson came over from England applies to Mr. Doyle," Chairman Phelan said. "We will avoid the risk of the public paying to see a fiasco. He must take ordinary fights here first, or box around Boston and other places to prove his ability."

Dempsey said tonight that the start of Doyle's campaign is being delayed until he returns from Hollywood. The Thrush is there hopeful of continuing a movie career begun abroad.

Staging a garrison finish which produced 14 points to their opponents' 3 in the final quarter, the Cumberland Knights of Pythias defeated SS. Peter and Paul Club in the opening game by 36 to 23.

Keyser's Golden Knights defeated the Goodwill Firemen in a league contest at Lonaconing, 49 to 44.

Eastern College 'Ivy' League Looms as Reality Next Season

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 (AP).—The rapidity with which the old guard Eastern universities have been revising their football schedules indicate today to observers that the "Ivy League," so-called, will be a reality by 1936 at the latest.

The group comprises Brown, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Princeton and Yale. Seven of these eight colleges, Brown being the exception, already are aligned in basket ball, baseball and track sports.

Yale's decision to alternate Army and Navy on its gridiron slate, along with the scheduling of Cornell as an opening opponent in 1936, marks the latest development in the new line-up. This assures Cornell at least four games within the "Ivy League" next year, when the Ithacans will have a one-year lapse in football relations with Princeton. It also gives Yale six "league" contests and continues the Eli policy of discarding "breather" games.

Dartmouth's 1936 schedule calls for "league" engagements with Brown, Harvard, Yale, Columbia. Brown listed Harvard, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Yale and Columbia. The Princeton schedule for next year lists Pennsylvania, Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth.

The threat of a break in relations between Columbia and Pennsylvania, voiced by student editors following the riotous basket ball game played in New York last week, is not taken seriously by university officials.

Cards, Hoyas Meet Tests Tonight

Invasion of St. Thomas and Temple Fives No Set-ups for Locals.

GEORGETOWN and Catholic University will gird their loins and return to the court wars tonight, pairing off with top-notch opponents in Temple and St. Thomas—a couple of clubs that have attracted wide attention in Eastern court circles this season.

While the Hoyas and Cardinals are supplying the local customers with a small but select program, Maryland's creepy and crippled Terrapins move into action against the University of Virginia at Charlottesville. The other teams are resting—on their laurels and otherwise.

Of the three home-town bucket brigades in action only Catholic U is given an even chance of winning. It is the final game of the season for C. U., and the last games of their respective careers for Co-Captains Abe Rosenfield and Babe Gearty, and Gene Augusterfer.

Revenge Sought.

There is also a small matter of a defeat suffered at the hands of St. Thomas earlier in the season to be attended to. No team has whipped the Cards twice this season and the boys are opposed to making exceptions for the Tommies.

Georgetown took a 40-26 drubbing from Temple at Philadelphia and doesn't seem to be improved enough to alter matters this time. In Red Rosan, a guard, the visitors will show one of the East's smoothest and most colorful performers. Rosan is almost certain of making the all-conference team and is an all-American nominee.

Just as Rosan is the big gun of the Temple attack, so big Buddy Deitch, St. Thomas center, is the most prolific scorer on the Tommies' roster. The little fellow speared 17 points in his first encounter with the Cards, while Coleman, a teammate, came through with 11. C. U.'s chances of winning depend almost wholly on its ability to stop these two men.

Maryland Is Long Shot.

Maryland will go into action in the role of underdog, despite the fact that it administered a 44-to-24 lacing to the Cavaliers in their first scrap at College Park. The absence of Bernie Buscher, regular forward, who is lost for the remainder of the season with a bruised leg, and Vic Willis, the center, now in drydock for repairs to a damaged knee, appear to be a handicap the Terps can not overcome.

Oddly enough all of the local aggregations will have to display better brands of play than they exhibited in their last games to entertain any hopes of winning. Georgetown was terrible against West Virginia, and Maryland and C. U. were just as bad in their annual game.

Georgetown's freshmen supply the preliminary game at Tech High School gym, meeting St. John's Prep at 7:30 o'clock. The main attraction is scheduled for 8:30. At C. U. the freshmen play Tech High School at 7 o'clock in the preliminary.

V. M. I. Court Team Facing Three Tests

Lexington, Va., Feb. 19 (Spl.).—V. M. I.'s basket ball team will be the only cadet varsity club in action this week, and all three games played by Coach Frank Summers' squad will be on the road. The cadets will play return games with North Carolina Thursday, William and Mary Friday, and Richmond Saturday.

In earlier games V. M. I. has dropped exciting games to each of these opponents, but only after playing one-half of each tilt on even terms or better.

The varsity wrestlers are working out under Coach Frank Carek this week in preparation for the conference tournament at Washington and Lee on March 1 and 2. The dual-meet season was closed with last Saturday's smashing 29-to-5 victory over Virginia Tech.

C. U. Gridmen Will Take on DePaul

Bergman Books Contest for Chicago Stadium on November 2.

A SIXTH game was added to Catholic University's 1935 football schedule yesterday when Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman announced that the Cardinals will play DePaul University November 2, at Soldiers Field, Chicago.

Games with Duquesne LaSalle, West Virginia Wesleyan, Western Maryland and North Carolina State already have been announced. The Chicago trip will be the longest ever made by a Catholic University eleven.

DePaul, a fairly strong aggregation, is coached by Jim Kelly, who has been very successful while at the helm of the Blue Demons, as the Chicagoans prefer to be known on the gridiron.

Bergman also is angling for a boxing match to fill the date vacated by Duquesne, which has abandoned the sport for the season. The Dukes were scheduled to meet the Cards at Brookland a week from Saturday, but preferred to strike instead when their coach was relieved of his duties, and salary.

The C. U. director of athletics hopes to announce a new opponent today.

Women to Hold 'Field Day' On Links

Golf Association President to Sponsor Tourney on May 23.

A "FIELD DAY" which will be sponsored by the president, Mrs. Charles K. Wing, at her home course, Army and Navy, yesterday was announced as the only new feature on the schedule of golfing events drawn up tentatively by the tournament committee of the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association.

This "field day" is listed for May 23, and Mrs. Wing is donating a trophy to the winner.

The District championship dates will be June 17-21, inclusive, with Indian Spring as the scene. The second most important tournament—The Washington Post match play with handicap tournament—will take place May 13-17 at Congressional, home club of the defending champion, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie.

Woodmont was awarded the girls' junior championship, won last season by Helen Dettweiler, June 27-28 are the dates. This is a 36-hole medal affair.

Memorial on April 26.

As is customary since its inception a few years ago, the Phyllis Keeler Memorial Trophy tournament will open the season on April 25 at Washington Golf and Country Club.

The Star Cup tournament was awarded Manor; the Herald, Kenwood, and either Army and Navy or Chevy Chase will get the Times Cup.

August 26-31 being the dates for the Women's National championship at Minneapolis, no tournaments were scheduled here that week.

No schedule of the first and second team matches was mapped out, but it was announced that they would begin on April 1, with the courses to be announced in a few weeks. This season's matches will be played in Scotch foursomes.

Home-and-home matches will be booked with Richmond and Baltimore, and possibly Philadelphia.

The tentative schedule, as announced by Mrs. Roy C. Miller, tournament chairman, follows:

April 26—Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club.
May 13-17—Washington Post match play handicap tournament at Congressional.
May 23—Field Day at Army and Navy.

from Gordon Rainey, of Virginia. They will be headed by Capt. Fred Lloyd of Duke, who will be ably assisted by Ernest Alterman, Clemson; M. M. Tuttle, Carolina State; Tom Birmingham, Maryland; Ernest Eustler, North Carolina; Park Jenkins, South Carolina, and Fred Hall, V. P. I.

Seven competitors will risk stepping into the same ring with Ivan Nedomatsky, Maryland's outstanding 135-pounder, in the lightweight milling. Besides Nedomatsky there will be Bubber Dawson, Clemson; Jack Kneipp, Duke; Seaman Hudson, North Carolina State; John Edwards, Carolina; Tom Dunn, South Carolina, and Marion Brooks, the Virginian who was defeated by Nedomatsky last week.

The welterweight competition will lie between Maynard Womer, Virginia's defending champion, and an ominous field. Walter Webb, Maryland 145-pounder, extended Womer to the limit last week and may find the answer by conference time. Jimmy McCall, Duke; Glenn Pentland, Carolina State; Joe Fisher, Carolina, and Bill Humphlett, South Carolina, all are capable of turning in a few surprise wins.

Aspiring 155-pounders drew several sighs of relief when it was learned that Capt. Jack Fabri of State College would not compete in the junior middleweight fisticuffing this year. Fabri is all tied up in doing practice teaching in connection with his course in high school teaching and will be unable to devote any further time to the ring.

Paul Lofton, Clemson; Al Mann, Duke; Lyman McAboy, Maryland; Jules Medynski, Carolina; Harry Hilton, South Carolina, and Bill McClung, Virginia, will do honors in the 155-pound class.

Matulewicz Favored.

Ray Matulewicz, Duke 165-pounder, stands head and shoulders above all competition in the middleweight division, but there will be plenty willing to attempt to upset the Blue Devil belter. Mike Lombardo, Maryland; Dave Stoddard, South Carolina; Capt. Sam Giddings, Carolina; Mortimer Caplin, Virginia, and Edward Jean, Washington and Lee.

A slender entry list holds forth in the light-heavyweight division. Stewart McCaw, Maryland's defending champion; Ralph Powell, Carolina State; Max Novich, North Carolina, and Jack Noll will be the only ones to fling fists at the 175-pound weight.

Sully Granger, Duke; Jack Gormley, Maryland; Murray Kanner or Harry Alderman, North Carolina, and Fred Cramer, Virginia, will compete in the heavyweight division.

Maj. Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller, of Washington; Allie Wolfe, of Philadelphia, and Ed Brockman, of Baltimore, will officiate at the fisticuffing which gets under way at 2 p. m. Friday.

Grain Prices Droop Under Profit Taking

Cotton Quotations Also Give Way During Day's Trading.

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—Grain prices sagged today under the weight of profit taking, failing to sustain the sharp advances established Monday in brief trading permitted by market officials after announcement of the Supreme Court's gold decisions.

Moreover, uncertainty as to the monetary situation, swept away by the Administration victory in the gold cases, was transplanted by uncertainty as to possibility of fresh importations of foreign grains into the United States, should prices rise here independently of world markets.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¾ of a cent below Monday's finish; May, 98¼@98¾, and corn was ¾ to 1¾ cents down; May, 87¼@87¾. Oats lost ⅛ to 1 cent; rye, 1 to 1½ cents, and barley was ⅛ to 1 cent higher.

Argentine Offerings.

Offerings of cheap Argentine yellow corn stirred bears and as a result much liquidation was in evidence in the corn pit, tending to weaken the entire market. Word was received of the offering of Argentine yellow corn, c. i. f., to Montreal or Atlantic and Gulf ports for March shipments at 56 cents, buyer to pay the 25 cents import duty. Later date shipments were quoted cheaper. A cargo of Danubian corn in excess of 200,000 bushels is due in Boston this week.

With the gold cases decided, attention turned to normal market factors. Talk was current among bears that even though the Government's monetary program has been clarified there remains in some quarters at least a need for restoration of confidence. Assertions were heard that the court's action probably was largely discounted in advance.

May Wheat at 99¾.

Resting orders to buy accounted for a fractional bulge at the opening. May wheat touching a high of 99¾ cents a bushel, top price since January 13, but profit taking soon brought a reaction. Five minutes after the start, wheat had settled back to around the previous close. Failure of the Liverpool market to show more than mild response to Monday's upturn here was disquieting. Houses with Eastern connections were credited with selling May wheat in small lots, presumably representing scattered liquidation by longs.

Bullish interests predicted a revival of the commercial demand for wheat inasmuch as flour-users, like speculators, held orders pending the gold decision. Mill buying was somewhat disappointing but this was regarded as due to the fact that mills last night were uncertain as to what the market might do today. Advices from the Northwest, however, indicated an improvement in the flour demand.

Cotton Market

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Cotton reacted today under realizing and liquidation, closing steady at net declines of 9 to 14 points. Many who bought on the gold-clause decision yesterday appeared to be on the selling side.

Initial offerings were absorbed by some overnight buying orders and prices worked up slightly right after the call, but the demand soon tapered off and reactionary impulses were promoted by the action of the grain and stock markets later in the day.

Trading was fairly active at the start, but the market became quiet as prices eased off and while a little more trade buying made its appearance on the declines buyers showed little disposition to follow up the bulges.

Prices reached the lowest levels in the late trading, with March selling at 12.43 and October at 12.47, or 10 to 15 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

Exports today, 12,768, making 3,228,511 so far this season. Port receipts, 6,578. U. S. port stocks, 2,666,518.

Futures Price Range.

| January | 12.67 | 12.57 | 12.57 |

Spot, steady; middling, 12.65.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil values reacted today after a further show of firmness in the early trading. Final prices were 1 point lower to 3 points net higher. Business was smaller than the day previous, amounting to 105 contracts, about half of which centered in the July position.

The action of the market indicated an overwhelming situation, resulting from adjustment the day before following the gold clause decision.

Crude oil was strong, selling at new highs at 10½ cents at all Southern points, while an advance was made in tallow; greases ruled dull but prices unchanged.

Bleachable spot nominal; March closed 11.71; May, 11.78; July, 11.83; September, 11.86.

Boston Wool Lower.

Boston, Feb. 19 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture).—Asking prices on grade A Western-grown spot wools in Boston have been revised downward from recent quoted levels at which they will sell here, sources, to ranges within which similar wools handled direct from the growers have been selling.

Recent weakness of sliking prices on Western-grown wools also brought the price basis of these wools nearer to that of fleece wools, fleece wools have been selling for a long time. Recent weakness in prices of fleece wools and easing of foreign weather were influences that contributed to this revision of quotations.

Holders of Billions of Railroad Obligations Oppose Bill Sponsored by Coordinator Eastman to Hasten Reorganizations.

New York, Feb. 20.—Financial institutions holding billions of dollars of railroad obligations express keen dissatisfaction with the bill to amend section 77 of the bankruptcy act, designed to hasten railroad reorganizations, which has been drafted and proposed by Mr. Eastman, coordinator of transportation.

These institutions express the view that this bill, if enacted into law, would impose unjustly severe and perhaps unnecessary sacrifices upon institutional holders of railroad bonds. Furthermore, they hold that, by further weakening the status of bondholders, this measure will undermine the willingness of investors for the future to invest in railroad securities because of the mortgage and other contractual protection which they are presumed to afford.

The proposed amendments to the bankruptcy act, contained in Mr. Eastman's third and latest report to Congress on the subject of railroad legislation, would effect several revolutionary changes in the law governing railroad reorganizations. In the first place, the new measure would require that a plan of reorganization shall be promulgated within six months after trustees have been appointed for a railroad property under the act. If a railroad is already in bankruptcy, a plan must be presented six months after the enactment of the new measure. This is designed to end the present tendency to delay reorganizations of weak railroads until conditions affecting the carriers improve. Hastening of reorganizations is now favored because of the belief that increased maintenance and modernization outlays will follow, with consequent benefit to business.

Fixed Charges 80% Of Average Earnings.

In the second place, the bill seeks to assure that reorganization will be drastic enough. Unless exception is made by the commission, the bill requires that fixed charges be scaled down to 80 per cent of the average earnings of a railroad undergoing reorganization during the three consecutive years of the past ten in which they were lowest. The requirement that stockholders must approve a plan unless the corporation is held insolvent, a fatal defect in the existing section 77, is modified by a provision that solvency shall be determined in part on the basis of a valuation which shall consider present and prospective earning power as well as other considerations, such as functional depreciation of railroad property.

A third feature of the bill to which strong exception is taken is the provision that more than one-half, rather than two-thirds as in the present law, of each class of creditors must approve a reorganization plan before it may be confirmed by the court. Even more objectionable from the bondholders' viewpoint, however, is the further provision that the judge may confirm the reorganization plan without such approval if he finds that it "makes adequate provision for fair and equitable treatment for the interests or claims of those rejecting it."

The bill is evidently designed to rush a number of railroads, now in the hands of the courts or presently to find themselves in that status, through drastic financial reorganizations. Many railroad mortgage bonds, under the measure, would perforce be exchanged for income bonds or stock, and many financial institutions would be compelled to take on their books substantial losses which they still hope to avoid. These institutions now hope that, with an increase in traffic because of business recovery or through reduction of operating costs by applying some of the recommendations of Co-ordinator Eastman, it may prove possible later to reorganize weak railroads with far less drastic sacrifices required of bondholders.

Large Stockholders Delay Reorganization.

The attitude of large institutional holders of railroad obligations has undoubtedly tended to delay railroad reorganizations, and the material reduction in the fixed charges of the carriers which will sooner or later have to be effected. They argue, in answer, that railroad reorganization is a very delicate financial operation.

The existence of numerous divisional liens and involved relative rights of various individual issues prevents hurried reorganizations, unless the rights of particular classes of creditors are to be treated in cavalier fashion. A statute for quick reorganizations through a large measure of Interstate Commerce Commission and judicial compulsion, such as that now proposed by Mr. Eastman, is disliked for this reason.

Since more than $3,000,000,000 of railroad bonds are held by life insurance companies, well over $2,000,000,000 by commercial and savings banks and large additional sums by corporate fiduciaries and eleemosynary institutions, the institutional stake in railroad obligations is especially large. These institutions for the most part argue that conversion of fixed interest bonds into contingent charge obligations and stock is more serious to them than to individual investors, and hence that they should not be compelled precipitately to lose their contractual position when larger railroad earnings in the early future may make possible far less drastic treatment of their holdings.

Federal Bonds Strong Feature Of Day's Trades

Callable Issues Are Exception to General Rise to New Highs.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—United States Government obligations were the strong spot in the bond market today. Corporate loans were neglected and moved narrowly.

Disregarding gold clauses, traders and investors bought freely of all Federal issues except those that are now callable, and so spirited was the bidding that practically the entire list of direct and indirect obligations advanced to new record highs, the exceptions being Liberty 3½s and the first and fourth 4¼s. The gains ranged from 2-32d to 12-32d.

Unconfirmed reports in investment circles that the Treasury was considering converting all the long-term bonds that can be called, thereby substituting gold currency obligations with others that would pay a lower interest rate, was believed in some quarters to be the reason for the softness of Liberty 3½s, which lost 7-32d at 104.5. The first 4¼s yielded 1-32d and the fourth 4¼s held unchanged.

Corporation Bonds Dull.

Minor gains and losses were about evenly divided in the corporate section which lacked much of the activity that featured Monday's trading after the Supreme Court decisions. Railroad and utility bonds selling higher included American Telephone 5s at 112½, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s at 118⅝, Missouri Pacific 5s at 29¼, and Southern Pacific 4½s at 66⅞.

Missouri-Kansas-Texas adjustment 5s lost 4⅜ points at 23, following announcement that the semi-annual interest on this issue which is payable April 1, would not be paid. Other liens of this road were lower as were St. Paul 5s at 23, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 54½, International Telephone 5s at 65¾, and North American 5s at 85. The Associated Press averages for 20 rails, 10 industrials and 10 utilities were unchanged to .2 of a point higher, while 10 low-yield bonds averaged .1 of a point lower at 110.0.

The foreign section was more active and prices generally were higher, including Argentine 6s at 91¾, Canadian 4s, French 7½s at 189¾, and Italian 7s at 93⅜.

Transfers aggregated $16,122,000 par value, compared with $18,255,000 on Monday and the Government turnover was $5,320,000, against $6,490,000.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Prices maintained a firm undertone on the stock exchange today. Transatlantic issues, industrials, and west Australian gold mining shares held early gains, while other stocks eased on profit taking. The market closed firm.

Paris—Quotations recovered on the bourse under the influence of the American gold clause decision. Canadian Pacific, Royal Dutch, Bank of France and chemical issues especially advanced in a rather quiet market. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Business was quiet but steady on the boerse today, with prices generally better.

Lumber Sales Up With Better Price Outlook

Shipments Higher and Production Lower Than A Year Ago.

New York, Feb. 9.—Although lumber production should expand moderately in the early future, it probably will not materially exceed 1934 levels until June. From then on, year to year comparison will be favorable, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York. Orders and shipments will be well ahead of 1934 levels until March. Gains in March, April and May, if any, will be moderate, but very favorable year to year comparisons are probable in June and July.

During a large part of 1934 lumber production was above shipments and orders received. Hence, stocks were built up and in the closing months of the year were well above those of a year earlier. Since November, however, shipments and new orders have exceeded production by rather wide margins and stocks have been reduced. At present stocks are only slightly above those on hand at this time last year. Considering demand prospects over future months, the statistical position is fairly satisfactory.

Shipments and orders for the first three weeks of January were 25 per cent and 55 per cent, respectively, above those of a year earlier, while production was 1 per cent lower. Production will probably continue to be restricted by the control provisions of the code and a further improvement in the statistical position is indicated.

Dealers were influenced by price uncertainties to curtail purchases throughout most of 1934. As a result, dealer stocks were depleted and the usual seasonal drop in orders in December was prevented by a necessary replenishment of inventories. The same factor probably was responsible for the favorable level of shipments in January. It is not believed that dealer stocks are yet at normal levels and further buying of this nature will probably be witnessed in coming months. Moreover, confidence in prices is improving, despite the suspension of code provisions, and forward purchases may be more generally undertaken.

Big Department Stores Expect Substantial Buying Gains

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Retail executives were hopeful today that the passing of the uncertainty over the gold decision would bring a substantial boost in consumer buying.

While the effect of the decision was interpreted as largely psychological, an executive of one of the larger New York department stores said, "Most of the upturn of the past 18 months has been caused by psychological factors.

"It is logical to assume that the gold clause decision will have the same effect," he added, "and we have strengthened our selling program, and expect a definite increase in business."

Another prominent merchandising executive said he expected the decision would stimulate buying, but "that is only a hope as yet."

Some quarters thought the effect might be particularly pronounced in New York, because of its keen consciousness of financial developments. Improvement in sales of higher grade merchandise, particularly, was anticipated.

Earliest repercussions were noted in wholesale markets, particularly textiles, where yesterday's rise in raw staple markets prompted some stiffening of prices.

Officials of one of the largest food chain-store systems said no effect upon its business was anticipated.

The Markets at a Glance

What the Stock Market Did.

| | Tue. | Mon. |

| Advances | 207 | 615 |
| Declines | 446 | 94 |
| Unchanged | 158 | 113 |
| Total issues | 811 | 822 |

Stocks—Adjustment and profit taking eased prices downward in a slower session. Leaders closed off fractions to a point or more. Sales were tabulated at 1,102,910 shares.

Bonds—Federals led upturns in complete disregard of technical import of the gold decision. All Government issues except those now callable were freely bought, most of them advancing to record highs. Corporate sections were about even in gains and losses through the list. Transfers dropped to $16,122,000 compared with $18,255,000 on Monday. Government turnover was $5,320,000 against $6,490,000 on Monday.

Curb—Profit taking here as on the large board halted advances and with the exception of scattered specialties sought lower levels. Sales were down to 186,000 shares as compared with 284,000 the day previous.

Wheat—Prices sagged under weight of the sharp advances made in the previous session. Liquidation in the corn pit weakened the market's mainstay and most wheats closed unchanged to ¾ of a cent below the previous finish. May wheat at 98¼, and May corn at 87¼.

Cotton—Slight reactions drove prices from peaks gained on Monday. Closes were steady at net declines of 9 to 14 points. May closed at 12.53.

Coffee—Spot coffee was steady. Rio, No. 7, sold at 8¼, and Santos, No. 4, at 10¾.

Sugar—Raw sugar was strong and closed at 2.95. Refined was unchanged, at 4.30 and 4.50 for fine granulated.

Silver—Bar silver was ½ higher in New York, to close at 55¼. In London it sold at 25d. (U. S. equivalent, 55.07 per ounce.)

Dollar—The United States dollar was easy in foreign exchanges. It was quoted in New York in terms of foreign exchanges at $4.88¾ to the English pound; 40.25 cents to the German mark, and 6.81⅞ cents to the French franc.

American Smelting Sells 52,450 United Verde

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Officials of American Smelting & Refining Co. said today that the company no longer held 52,450 shares of United Verde Copper Co. stock, purchased from the estate of the late William A. Clark, jr.

The district court at Butte, Mont., approved the sale of the shares to American Smelting yesterday at prices netting the estate $3,233,750. Officials of American Smelting declined to say how it had disposed of the stock, but it was assumed in Wall street that it had been resold, possibly to Phelps Dodge Corporation.

Phelps Dodge recently acquired control of United Verde. Prior to that, Wall street understood that American Smelting also had been seeking control.

Stock Market Uplift Fades With Selling

Inclination to Take Profits Causes Slight Declines.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Bullish enthusiasm appeared to wane in the markets today after the uprush in the previous session on the gold-clause decision. Security and commodity prices were adjusted downward.

The price trend, Wall street quarters thought, was more one of evening up and profit taking than any real desire on the part of most investors and traders to be out of the markets. Stock leaders, however, gave up fractions to a point or more and grains and cotton were reactionary.

Turnover in stocks aggregated 1,102,910 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 shares declined .7 of a point to 39.4.

N. Y. Tractions Strong.

New York City tractions opposed the general trend as traders took note of reports in financial quarters that the long-drawn-out negotiations for unification of the municipal and privately owned subway systems appeared to be approaching a successful climax. Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit was a leader in the group's activity with a rise of 1⅜ points to 43⅞.

After the close of trading Chesapeake Corporation, holding unit of the Van Sweringen rail system, announced its directors had increased the annual dividend payment to $3 from the $2.50 previously paid. The stock closed ⅝ of a point higher at 41¾.

Among trading favorites in the share markets which responded to the day's increased offerings with declines of around 1 to 1½ points were U. S. Steel at 36½, Westinghouse at 39¾, American Telephone at 104, Woolworth at 54¾, American Can at 119¾, Santa Fe at 45⅝, Bethlehem at 30¾, Chrysler at 39⅞, Montgomery Ward at 27¼ and Southern Railway at 12¾. Fractional losses appeared in American Smelting at 36⅞, American Tobacco B at 81¼, Consolidated Gas at 17½, General Motors at 32¼, General Electric at 24½ and Standard Oil of New Jersey at 41⅛.

Curb Declines Follow Day's Trading Trend

Fajardo Sugar Rises Four Points; Transactions Are Lower.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP).—Profit taking called a halt to the advancing trend on the Curb Exchange today and, with the exception of scattered specialties, the majority of shares closed moderately lower. Trading was less active than in the previous session.

Parker Rust Proof and Singer Manufacturing rose a point each and Fajardo Sugar got up 4, all on light dealings. Montgomery Ward "A" advanced a major fraction on news of the declaration of a dividend of $1.75 on account of accumulations. Pioneer Gold and American Cyanamid B both finished slightly higher.

Losses of fractions to around a point were recorded by Aluminum Co. of America, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Electric Bond & Share, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum, Lake Shore, Pan American Airways, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, American Gas & Electric Technicolor and Hiram Walker.

Transfers approximated 186,000 shares compared with 284,000 yesterday.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Wise Man.

When Coolidge sat in pomp and state upon this country throne, prosperity was high and great, there was no grief or groan. The money grew on tree and shrub, on bush and pumpkin vine, and every voter had his tub of kopecks down in brine. Great credit went to Coolidge then, he was behind it all; it was believed he'd run again, and win out, in the fall. And so it was a bitter slam, a shock designed to stun, when he sent forth his telegram, "I do not choose to run." It was a cryptic, weird decree, that few could understand; was he in earnest, or would be come forth at our demand? The voters begged him to explain, they begged him, one by one; but Coolidge smiled and said again, "I do not choose to run." He would be drafted, he opined, or so some people say; then he could run with tranquil mind, and win, the good old way. He would be chosen, he believed, according to the tale; but he was bitterly deceived — the outcome made him rail. The situation seemed absurd, he could not see the fun, when people took him at his word—he didn't choose to run. Could he have looked some months ahead, and seen the crash on deck, with all our bulwarks lying dead, in melancholy wreck, he would have made his message clear as bullets from a gun, he would have voiced it far and near—"I do not choose to run." The wisest words, methink, they seem, that statesmanship has sprung, since our great bird began to scream, and government was young.

Woman Jailer Dismissed But Refuses to Go

Mrs. Waters Defies State to Oust Her Until She Is 'Vindicated.'

Granite, Okla., Feb. 19 (AP).—Mrs. George A. Waters, dismissed as the Nation's only woman warden of a men's prison on the heels of a wholesale delivery, defied the State tonight to put her out before she is "vindicated."

A new warden for the institution—the Oklahoma State Reformatory near here—was named today as the hunt broadened to other States for the 18 fugitives still at large of 32 who killed a guard and escaped Sunday.

"I am remaining until vindicated," was the 45-year-old woman's firm reply to the naming of a successor.

Demands Senate Inquiry.

She referred to charges of cruelty, inefficiency and mismanagement investigated by the State board of affairs. L. M. Nichols, board chairman, announced Mrs. Waters' dismissal.

"I want the State Senate to investigate the charges," she demanded, a little while before that body had confirmed Sheriff Fred Hunt, of Tishomingo, to replace her.

In the Senate, Mrs. Waters has a determined defender — Henry S. Johnston, who as Governor, appointed her warden eight years ago.

A Senate committee was named recently to investigate the prison. Don Wilbanks, chairman, immediately announced a sub-committee of four would go to the reformatory tomorrow.

Nichols did not indicate whether an attempt would be made to install Sheriff Hunt at once.

She's 'In Command.'

"I am in command of the situation," Mrs. Waters said. "I am not afraid of anything that might happen. All I ask is that I be allowed to stay on the job until my record is cleared."

Mrs. Waters continued to press the search for the escaped convicts.

"They killed my guard. They must be brought back. We must think of capturing them before we think of personalities," she insisted. Load after load of prison guards and civilian volunteers were dispatched to run down rumors concerning the route of flight of the desperate convicts.

Quick identification of the fugitives is impossible. They wear blue shirts and blue denim trousers similar to those worn by many rural dwellers. There are no stripes. The only means of identification is through pictures, fingerprints and small numbers stenciled on the clothing.

Reports convicts had been sighted at points as widely separated as New Mexico and Minnesota poured into the prison.

Women Can't Cook, He Said; So What?

So Now He'll Take a Lady Unto Wife.

London, Feb. 19 (AP).—The engagement of Robert Boothby, M. P. —he once said women didn't know how to cook—and Diana Cavendish, daughter of Lord Richard and Lady Moyra Cavendish, was announced today.

Boothby, who is 35 years of age and has been a conservative member of Parliament since he was 24, once told a political meeting "our women don't know how to cook and they won't bother to learn."

He added: "Don't marry a girl until she knows how to cook."

That brought the rising young commoner 500 letters from angry women, some of whom offered to marry him and disprove his assertion.

His fiancee is 25, third daughter of Lord and Lady Cavendish to marry a member of the House of Commons.

By Morgan Baker.

GENERAL recommendations for improving Government personnel conditions made by the Commission of Inquiry on Public Service, under direction of Dr. L. D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota, follow:

BAKER.

1. Establishment of a career basis for the general appointive services through subdivision into five broad career services, including: (a) the administrative service; (b) the professional and technical service; (c) the clerical service; (d) the skilled and trades service; (e) the unskilled service.

These would take the place, in recruitment, of present minute civil service classification.

2. Provision in each career service group for: (a) recruitment geared to the existing American educational system; (b) competitive entrance examinations for all positions; (c) certification by accredited professional associations and by legally established professional bodies for all professional and technical positions; (d) establishment of a probationary period of not less than six months before an appointment becomes permanent; (e) advancement on the basis of merit to the highest nonpolitical positions including many not now under civil service; (f) adequate provision for transfer both within each career service group and from one group to another; (g) higher salaries for the top positions; (h) adequate retirement and pension provisions.

3. Provision by personnel officers and general administrators to prevent stagnation of personnel through: (a) developing contracts between superiors and subordinates; (b) encouraging training in the service; (c) facilitating transfers particularly during the early stages of an employe's career.

4. Provision for security for public employes against dismissal or demotion for trival personal, religious, racial, political or other arbitrary or extraneous reasons, provided such legislation guaranteeing tenure is enacted in conjunction with: (a) A system of recruitment, appointment and probation which will insure the appointment of thoroughly capable persons only; (b) periodic service records with a procedure for transfer, adjustment and reduction of pay with reduction of service; (c) the pensioning of superannuated employes; (d) an adequate administrative procedure for discipline or discharge from the service.

5. Establishment of cooperation between Federal personnel administration and State and local administrations through such measures as: (a) Joint use of eligible lists; (b) joint preparation and conduct of examinations; (c) development of technical studies.

6. Establishment of similar cooperation between State and local personnel agencies.

7. Adoption in States and local units of the short ballot which we have always had in the Federal Government.

8. The modernization of uneconomic and unworkable small units of local government through: (a) Consolidation of boundaries and positions; (b) establishment of joint services; (c) use of central technical assistance, particularly in maintaining personnel administration.

9. Undertaking by public personnel officers throughout the country of far more extensive research in the technical problems of personnel administration, wherever possible in cooperation with qualified specialists in private business and in the universities.

Publishers Weigh Renewal of Code

Inland Group Hears Pro and Con Views.

Chicago, Feb. 19 (AP).—Renewal of the national newspaper code at its expiration in June was considered today by members of the Inland Daily Press Association.

Verne Joy, of Centralia, Ill., the association's representative on the newspaper code authority, reported to publishers attending the fiftieth annual convention of the group arguments he had received for and against extension of the newspaper code another year. His report was accepted without action.

"Compliance to the code has been almost universal," Joy declared. He explained the operations of the code authority for newspapers under NIRA.

Elisha Hanson, Washington attorney and general counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, praised the activities of publishers in fighting for the freedom of the press before code hearings in the National Capital.
